Introduction to the First Edition

This book is aimed primarily at club-level players with a playing strength of up to about 2200 Elo (or 200 ECF). When I was a young player at school I was always looking out for new repertoire books. I wanted something which would give me all I needed to know about the opening, without being too time-consuming, as I had plenty of other things to do with my time. I guess you could say I was not a very serious chess student and in fact I delighted in getting my opponents on unfamiliar ground, when my natural ability would get a chance to shine through.

The problem I found with the repertoire books of the time was they attempted to cover too much material. Main-line variations would be covered in just a few pages, so justice was never done to the lines recommended. In the end I would have to consult a more specialized work on one of the suggested variations to find out the true story behind it and waste valuable time in the process. Meanwhile, I would suffer a few painful reverses, as my lack of understanding was exposed on the board.

The aim of this book is to provide a complete repertoire for the boy I used to be. The variations chosen are a little offbeat, but they fit together very nicely. The three main systems, the Barry Attack, the 150 Attack and the Colle-Zukertort, can be used against virtually any defence Black plays against 1 d4. These contain the meat and bones of the book and, once mastered, will provide a complete repertoire for White against most defences. I have used all three successfully myself.

I have chosen systems that I believe will have the greatest psychological impact. There is a school of thought that says “you should play the man, not the board”. If you accept this, then you can learn a lot about an opponent from their choice of opening variation. For example, King’s Indian players tend to be well booked-up. They often accept structural weaknesses in return for attacking chances. The Barry Attack is likely to annoy King’s Indian players, who will be thrown onto their own resources from an early stage in unfamiliar positions where the usual plans just don’t work.

With reference to the material itself, wherever possible, I have tried to place the emphasis on understanding what is occurring through explanation, rather than by weighty variations. This is because, for the most part, the variations I recommend are flexible and the move-orders are often quite interchangeable. In such situations, understanding what you are trying to achieve is of far greater importance than remembering specific moves.

I have included a number of non-grandmaster games in the material. This is because I feel it will be useful for the reader to have a number of examples where Black defended less than perfectly, just as might happen in your average weekend tournament or local club match. These variations, although not objectively critical, should help to build your confidence in the recommended openings and aid you in understanding the various tactical motifs. Having confidence in your opening repertoire is in many ways as important as memorizing theory, because if you hit a snag, believing in your pet line will give you the self-assurance to solve any problems your opponent might set for you.

The astute reader will notice that Black has possibilities of achieving greater flexibility and therefore perhaps better chances of equality by utilizing a clever move-order, such as 1 d4 d5 2 c3 c5 or 1 d4 d5 2 d3 d6 3 e3 and then 3...e4 or 3...c5. While it is possible to play a Colle-Zukertort system against these moves, Black has better chances than normal. Therefore, to make the repertoire more effective, I have included chapters on the Anti-Benoni, Classical Queen’s Indian and Black’s alternatives after 1 d4 d5 2 d3. These variations give White the best chance of an opening advantage and can be added to the repertoire, as and when the reader feels ready, thus giving maximum flexibility.

To save the reader the time, I have tried to give only one recommendation per move for White, unless I felt it was prudent to give other examples of play to help you understand the main ideas. When I have given two possible continuations, they are usually of equal merit and it is up to you to decide which suits your personal style. Above all, I have offered variations that are likely to lead to the most fun for White as, after all, apart from for hard-nosed professionals, that is what playing chess is all about!

Updater’s Notes

The original A Killer Chess Opening Repertoire was one of my favourite opening works because it outlined a remarkably seamless attacking repertoire which wasn’t too theoretical. Therefore I was happy to accept the task of updating it. It proved a greater challenge than I expected but I hope you enjoy the result.

What Has Changed?
Summerscale’s book has been holding up amazingly well for more than a decade – mainly because it emphasized understanding through well-annotated example games rather than by providing reams of analysis. It also helps greatly that – with a very few exceptions – the lines recommended were very robust and not easily shaken by a novelty or two. Nevertheless, experience with the featured lines has grown and it’s now high time to update the theory. I have done my utmost to retain the spirit of the original work – even the exact wording has been left unchanged wherever reasonable. The original edition was a practical opening manual – not a detailed theoretical survey – and I have tried to keep it that way, giving no more detail than is necessary on a non-professional level. However, there is no way to deny that opening theory is rapidly expanding and that even low-theory lines are becoming more deeply explored – in particular lines which used to be described as ‘unclear’ or ‘unbalanced’. This is reflected in the update of this book. I realize it must give a denser and more theoretical impression than Summerscale’s original work, but hope that nobody feels intimidated by the added information. Most lines can still be played with very little memorization.
INTRODUCTION

The reader may ask whether the main games – some of them now rather dated – are still the best examples of play. My answer is a firm yes. For the book’s primary purpose, these games are extremely instructive. They may not show how a well-prepared professional faces these systems today (that information can be found in the notes) but in many cases they demonstrate typical reactions from an opponent who was hoping to face a main line and was slightly surprised by a system he had never taken very seriously.

Inevitably, most of Summerscale’s proposed repertoire has a bit less surprise value today than it had a decade ago. That’s the price of being the subject of a popular opening manual. But from Black’s viewpoint these systems (with the exception of the 150 Attack) are still annoying sidelines to which he only reluctantly pays attention – and only after he has completed his study of the main lines.

The Main Changes
The only main game I removed (or rather demoted) was Khalifman-Lobron, PCA Qualifier, Groningen 1993, whose place was taken by Game 46, Meister-Seuffert, Germany tt 2007/8. This was not a particularly dramatic change as the original game was a short draw which is now included in its entirety in the notes to the new game.

Six entirely new main games were added, mostly replacing what was given as sidelines in the original work:
- Game 14, Brousek-Rivest, corr. 2003
- Game 19, Dgebuadze-Cekro, Belgian Ch, Aalst 2005
- Game 34, Jobava-Zaragatski, Bad Zwesten 2005
- Game 41, Khenkin-P.Milov, Bad Homburg 2006
- Game 58, Korchnoi-Schlierf, Bad Wörishofen 2004
- Game 63, Belozerov-Sterliagova, Samara 2003
Even in these games you will find that I have retained most of Summerscale’s original annotations and included them in the relevant places in the new structure.

In addition I expanded a lot of notes from the original book and restructured them into new main games. The original annotations were mostly kept unchanged but some new game fragments and prose were added where it seemed appropriate.

My other contributions are dotted throughout the text, where some updating was useful or necessary. Obviously, any game references more recent than 1998 were not in the original book, and on the whole I have tended to update the analysis rather than the strategic commentary, as in many cases there was little to add to the original work in this respect, except where an entirely new line or plan is being recommended. Finally, the entire chess content (both old and new) was subjected to a systematic ‘blundercheck’ by Rybka 3, with the text amended when this threw up any important discoveries that also stood up to human scrutiny.

Sources

In addition to various electronic sources – most prominently Mega Database 2009 and Correspondence Database 2009 – a great number of books were consulted. Most had only a few pages or even a few lines that were relevant. The most important exception was Starting Out: d-Pawn Attacks by Richard Palliser (Everyman 2008) which covers several closely related topics. His Starting Out: The Colle Attack (Everyman 2007) was also quite useful.

Acknowledgements

I would like to thank Lars Breivik and Kristian Trygstad, who generously shared their analysis, and Stig Martinsen, who did likewise and even checked the manuscript against sources I didn’t have access to. I must also mention David Rudel, author of Zuke ’em – The Colle Zukertort Revolutionized, who has been remarkably eager to share his analysis with a competing author. His book as well as the supporting web pages (www.Zukertort.com) will be of interest to many readers. Thanks also to the editorial staff at Gambit Publications, who always improve my work.

1 Barry Attack

Introduction

Why does the average club player as White need something offbeat against the King’s Indian? Aren’t the main lines good enough? To answer this, let us look at a main-line variation of the King’s Indian.

1 d4 ♜f6 2 ♜f3 g6 3 c4 ♛g7 4 ♛c3 0-0 5 e4 ♛f6 6 ♛e2 e5 7 0-0 ♛c6 8 d5 ♛e7 9 ♛e1 ♛d7 10 ♛e3 f5 11 f3 f4 12 ♛f2 g5 (D)

This is one of the critical main lines of the Classical King’s Indian after 12 moves. And objectively, it does indeed put Black’s play to a severe test. But for many players, White’s position will represent a chess nightmare. Black has an automatic and very powerful long-term kingside attack. As if this weren’t enough, there are plenty of books telling Black exactly how to proceed, either to deliver mate or create enough chaos to make the issue completely unclear. Perhaps the worst thing is that Black seems to have all the fun. If you haven’t got hours, days or maybe even weeks to study this one line, then you could be in trouble.

Why should White have to subject himself to this sort of onslaught in the search for an opening advantage? Isn’t it time to put the ball back in Black’s court? The Barry Attack avoids not only the King’s Indian, but the Grünfeld as well. It is a ‘plug and play’ opening which can be learnt in a few hours. The basic idea is simple, if a little crude. No more mister nice guy; it’s time for blood!

For those who need a reminder of what it can be like to take White in the above diagram, I include the rest of the short and (for White) very painful game Perruchoud-Tischer, Biel 1990:

13 ♛b5 b6 14 b4 a6 15 ♛c3 ♛g6 16 a4 ♛b8 17 ♛d3 ♛f6 18 a5 bxa5 19 ♛xa5 h5 20 c5 g4 21 b5 g3 22 hxg3 fxg3 23 ♛xg3 h4 24 ♛f2 ♛h5 25 bxa6 ♛g5 26 ♛e1 ♛xf4 27 ♛xf4 ♛xf4 28 ♛xf2 ♛h2 29 a7 ♛g3 30 a8♛ ♛h1 ♛xf2 0-1
Absolutely typical! Just as White was busying himself taking his opponent’s queenside pieces and queening his passed pawn, Black launched a lethal mating attack. Enough of this pain and suffering! It’s time for the Killer Barry Attack.

![Chess Diagram]

Welcome to the wonderful world of the Barry Attack. The outlook for the moment is calm and there is not a pawn-storm in sight! Well, certainly not against the white king anyway. White has a crude, almost barbaric plan from this position: shove the h-pawn up the board and attempt to tear the black king limb from limb! There are a few circumstances when, as you might expect, this is not justified: specifically, when Black plays 6...c5 and continues to attack the centre and queenside aggressively. Then it is time to show your opponent that you are not just a mad hacker and hone those endgame skills to exploit the small but persistent advantages that arise. One of the main plus-points of the Barry Attack is that this time there are almost no books for Black to go running back to check.

6...c5

The year 1987 was a particularly important one for the Barry Attack, for it was the year that Mark Hebden was introduced, somewhat painfully, to its delights. After his defeat in this game, Hebden, a renowned King’s Indian specialist, went home and had a long, hard look at the opening. As we shall see, today he is one of the world’s leading exponents of the Barry Attack – he obviously came to the conclusion “if you can’t beat them, join them!”

6...c6 7 h4, 6...g4 7 dxe5 and 6...b6 7 dxe5 are all important alternatives, which we shall examine later.

7 dxe5 b6?!

7...c6 is critical – it is important for Black to put as much pressure on White’s centre as possible, so as to dissuade White from his kingside attack.

8 h4 a6 9 d3

The light-squared bishop plays a very important role in supporting White’s kingside attack, so naturally White avoids its exchange.

9...b7 10 h5 bd7 11 hxg6 fxg6

This gives Black some central lightsquare weaknesses (particularly e6) but is safer than the other recapture, which is extremely dangerous for the health of the black king.
If 11...hxg6 then 12 \( \textit{g}4 \) with the idea of \( \textit{f}3\text{-}h3 \), or the calmer 12 \( \textit{e}2 \), intending a more methodical transfer of forces to the h-file.

12 \( \textit{g}4 \textit{g}4 13 \textit{w}xg4 (D) \)

One thing you will often notice about the Barry Attack is that although White tends to build up a powerful attacking position, like here, he leaves no real weaknesses for Black to exploit. Indeed, if you look at the diagram you will see that it is Black who has the weak points for White to target.

13...\( \textit{f}5 14 \textit{w}h3 \textit{f}8 15 \textit{g}4 \textit{xf}4 \)

Sometimes Black will have to sacrifice in order to get meaningful counterplay and to stem the tide of the white attack. Here, this proves to be insufficient, but the alternatives were not much more attractive. If 15...\( \textit{f}6 \) then 16 \( \textit{h}6 \) gives White a strong kingside attack, at no risk.

16 \( \textit{exf}4 \textit{cxd}4 17 \textit{e}2 \textit{g}5 18 \textit{w}h5 \textit{d}6 19 \textit{f}7+ \textit{h}8 20 0-0-0 \textit{xe}5 21 \textit{fxe}5 \textit{exe}5 22 \textit{xd}4 \textit{g}7 23 \textit{wg}7+ \textit{wg}7 (D) \)

Black struggles on from here valiantly, but is ultimately lost, not only because of the material disadvantage, but also due to the passivity of his pieces.

24 \( \textit{d}e1 \textit{e}8 25 \textit{h}5 \textit{g}6 26 \textit{f}3 \)

26 \( \textit{e}5 \) would confirm the hopelessness of Black's cause. From here on White slightly misplays his position, but clearly his opening and middlegame play was a resounding success.

26...\( \textit{h}6 27 \textit{e}5+ \textit{g}7 28 \textit{eh}1 \textit{d}4 29 \textit{h}2 \textit{c}8 30 \textit{f}4 \textit{xf}4 31 \textit{f}5 \textit{g}6 32 \textit{xf}6 \textit{xg}6 33 \textit{xf}4 \textit{e}5 34 \textit{f}5 \textit{c}5 35 \textit{fh}5 \textit{e}4 \)

Black has done a great deal to improve the positioning of his pieces, but has not been able to redress the weakness of his pawn-structure.

36 \( \textit{h}6+ \textit{g}5 37 \textit{h}8 \textit{xe}4 38 \textit{f}8 \textit{f}3 39 \textit{d}2 \textit{e}4 40 \textit{d}8?! \textit{c}4? \)

Failing to make the most of his chances, which would be quite real after 40...\( \textit{e}3+ 41 \textit{d}3 \textit{g}3 \). Now White gets on top again.

41 \( \textit{b}3 \textit{c}7?! 42 \textit{xd}4 \textit{g}3 43 \textit{h}8 \textit{f}2 44 \textit{e}8 \textit{g}7 45 \textit{dxe}4 \)
White simplifies to a won rook and pawn endgame.

45...\textit{d}xe4 46 \textit{d}xe4 \textit{d}d7+ 47 \textit{c}3 \textit{f}3 48 \textit{e}8 \textit{d}c7+ 49 \textit{b}2 \textit{f}4 50 \textit{c}4 \textit{f}5 51 \textit{c}3 \textit{b}5 52 \textit{e}2 \textit{f}4 53 \textit{d}d4 \textit{b}xe4 54 \textit{b}xc4 \textit{d}d7+ 55 \textit{c}e5 \textit{f}f3 56 \textit{e}6 \textit{c}c7+ 57 \textit{d}d5 \textit{f}f4 58 \textit{c}5 \textit{f}f5 59 \textit{e}2 \textit{d}d7+ 60 \textit{c}c6 \textit{h}h7 61 \textit{d}d6 1-0

Again, it is no coincidence that shortly after this game, Hebden became one of the Barry Attack’s strongest advocates.

Early Deviations for Black

The Barry Attack is a somewhat unusual opening and as such, may encourage irregular responses from Black. As we shall see in this section, this approach by no means guarantees Black success.

Game 2

Black can also play:

a) 4...c6 is considered in Game 3 as it is closely related to the 4...\textit{g}7 5 e3 \textit{g}4 lines.

b) 4...a6 makes sense if Black wants to delay ...\textit{g}7 until White can no longer go for \textit{d}d2 and \textit{h}6 ideas. However, after 5 e3, Black should transpose to the main game with 5...\textit{g}7 rather than 5...b5 as in Sharbagat-Darbanvai

The main moves, covered in later games, are 5...\textit{g}4, 5...c6 and 5...0-0. Other rare alternatives are:

a) 5...\textit{bd}7?? 6 \textit{b}5 +– has been a quick point-collector on the British tournament circuit.

b) 5...\textit{h}5? is an attempt to harass the white bishop but wastes too much time. 6 \textit{g}5 h6 7 \textit{h}4 g5 (7...c6 8 \textit{e}5 \textit{b}6 9 \textit{b}1 \textit{f}6 10 \textit{d}3 \textit{e}6 11 b4 \textit{bd}7 12 f4 \textit{xe}5 13 fxe5 \textit{d}7 14 0-0 ± Hebden-Feller, Cappelle la Grande...
2005) is the most consistent continuation of Black’s somewhat dubious plan, which he began on move 5, to bag the bishop-pair. With accurate play, White is able to exploit Black’s loss of tempi. After 8 \(\text{Qe}5!\) Black has a choice:

b1) 8...\(\text{Qf}6\) is a little illogical, because the whole point of Black’s play has been to exchange off White’s dark-squared bishop. If Black fails to achieve this, he has simply weakened his kingside for no apparent reason. White has a clear edge after 9 \(\text{Ag}3\) \(\text{Af}5\) 10 \(\text{Ad}3\) \(\text{Ax}d3\) 11 \(\text{Wx}d3\) c6 12 h4 g4 13 h5 \(\text{Qbd}7\) 14 \(\text{We}2\) \(\text{Wa}5\) 15 \(\text{Qx}d7\) \(\text{Qxd}7\) 16 0-0-0, Wirthensohn-Bloessler, Lenk 1992.

b2) 8...\(\text{Ax}e5\) 9 dxe5 \(\text{Qg}7\) (after 9...g\(xh4\) 10 \(\text{Wxh}5\) Black has no compensation for his kingside pawn weaknesses) 10 \(\text{Ag}3\) \(\text{Ae}6\) 11 h4! (the most incisive move – Black is made to pay for his over-ambitious kingside pawn advances) 11...\(\text{Ag}8\) 12 h\(xg5\) \(\text{hxg}5\) 13 e4 \(\pm\) (Black is given no respite and now faces the unenviable choice of opening the centre for White’s better-placed forces, or closing it, and thus leaving his knight on g7 woefully misplaced) 13...dxe4 (13...d4 14 \(\text{Da}4\) b6?! 15 \(\text{Wd}2\) f6 16 exf6 exf6 17 b4-0-0 c5 18 \(\text{Cc}3\) \(\text{We}7\) leads to a large advantage for White after 19 \(\text{Ab}5\) 14 \(\text{Wxd}8\) \(\text{Ax}d8\) 15 \(\text{Qxe}4\) \(\text{Qf}5\) 16 0-0-0+ \(\text{We}8\) 17 \(\text{Qx}g5\) \(\text{Qx}g3\) 18 \(\text{Qxe}6\) \(\text{Qh}1\)?! 19 \(\text{Qd}8\) (1-0) J.Pribyl-Penzold, 2nd Bundesliga 1991/2. An unusual mating position!

b) 5...\(\text{Af}5\) 6 \(\text{Qe}2\) c6. Black often has difficulties in the Barry Attack with the development of his light-squared bishop. On g4 it can be attacked by \(\text{Qe}5\), while on f5, as here, it can be a target for White’s kingside pawn advances. The awkward positioning of Black’s bishop led to an advantage for White in Suetin-Borisenko, USSR Ch, Kiev 1954 after 7 \(\text{Qe}5\) \(\text{Qfd}7\) 8 g4 \(\text{Qc}6\) 9 \(\text{Qd}3\) c5 10 0-0 0-0 11 \(\text{Qb}5\) \(\text{Qa}6\) 12 \(\text{Ag}3\) \(\text{Qf}6\) 13 \(\text{Qf}4\) \(\text{Qd}7\) 14 \(\text{Cc}3\) cxd4 15 exd4 \(\text{Cc}7\) 16 \(\text{Qf}3\) \(\text{Qc}6\) 17 \(\text{Qe}1\) b6?! 18 \(\text{Qd}3\) \(\text{b}7\) 19 \(\text{Qe}5\) \(\text{Qe}6\) 20 \(\text{Qg}2\) \(\text{Qc}8\) 21 \(\text{Qe}2\) \(\text{Qe}4\) 22 \(\text{Qxe}4\) dxe4 23 \(\text{Qxe}4\) \(\text{Qxe}4\) 24 \(\text{Qxe}4\) \(\text{Qxd}4\) 25 \(\text{Qxg}7\) \(\text{Qxg}7\) 26 \(\text{Qad}1\) \(\text{Qc}6\) 27 \(\text{Qc}5\) \(\text{Qe}8\) 28 \(\text{Qd}7\) \(\text{Qh}8\) 29 b4 b5 30 a4. White has kept the initiative.

6 \(\text{Qe}2\) Qbd7 7 \(\text{Qe}5\) c6

In Blatny-Likavsky, European Ch, Ohrid 2001 Black produced the amazing blunder 7...b6?? 8 \(\text{Qc}6\) 1-0.

8...\( \text{c} \text{c} \text{e} \text{c} \text{4} \)
Black tries to defuse the oncoming attack using the accepted method of piece exchanges, but she suffers a lack of coordination since her king is still in the centre. Although the black king is safer in the middle, White nevertheless finds a clever way to create problems on the kingside.

9 \( \text{d} \text{xe} \text{4} \text{d} \text{xe} \text{4} \) 10 h5 \( \text{d} \text{xe} \text{4} 11 \text{h} \text{6}!\) (D)

\[ \text{Diagram} \]

A nice intermezzo. The move h6 can be a major irritant if Black has not castled kingside, and justifies White’s early kingside pawn advance.

The dust has settled and material equality has been restored. Black is saddled with the worse bishop and, more importantly, a damaged pawn-structure. Against a grandmaster, Black is simply lost, with no way to defend her weaknesses in the long term. To her credit, Black struggles on valiantly for 30 moves, but the result is not in doubt.

It’s worth noting that in order to avoid the kind of things that happen in this game, the cunning move-order 4...\text{c} \text{6} 5 \text{e} \text{3} \text{d} \text{g} \text{4} 6 \text{e} \text{2} \text{d} \text{x} \text{f} \text{3}! is becoming increasingly popular. 5 e3

Since the original edition of this book, an alternative attacking system starting with 5 \Boxd2 – the ‘Tarzan Attack’ – has appeared on the tournament scene. White plans \Boxh6, 0-0-0 and a lightning attack down the h-file.
After some initial successes – by Heb-den among others – it now seems its sting has largely been removed. We shall not go into any detail on this, and just note that Black has another option to worry about.

5...\Boxg4 (D)

\textbf{6 \Boxe2}

This move is standard, but Heb-den’s little-tested 6 \Boxd3 still deserves serious attention. By taking advantage of the fact that Black has not yet cast-tled, White avoids the problematic exchange on f3 (as discussed in the note to 4...\Boxg7):

a) 6...\Boxxf3? 7 \Boxb5+ \Boxbd7 8 \text{gxf}3 Alternatively, 9...$a5 is a more logical continuation of Black’s plan to delay castling for as long as possible. In practice, play has continued 10 $xd7 $xd7 11 c4 $xe4 12 $xe4 e6 13 h4 $f6 14 $e5 (White aims for a small endgame advantage, but could also play for a kingside attack with 14 $e2 followed by g4 and h4-h5) 14...$xe5 15 $xe5 0-0 16 f3 $fd8 17 g4 $d5 18 $c4 b5 19 g5 ± Blatny-Lutz, Altensteig 1991. b) After 8...0-0-0 White can choose between an aggressive option and a solid one:

12 0-0-0

This leads to a real bloodbath, with both sides going all-out for the kill, and is certainly the most uncompromising approach. 12 \textit{\textit{d}}d1 b5 13 \textit{\textit{f}}f2 is perhaps a more circumspect way to attack the black king, without giving Black such a large target to aim at. The plan is b4 and business as usual. In this position, White would continue to delay castling, since, for the moment, his king is undoubtedly safer in the centre than on the queenside.

12...b5 13 h4 a5 14 g5

This gives rise to a typical scenario when players have castled on opposite wings. Each side has a quickly-advancing pawn-storm on 'his' flank. This type of position is not for the faint-hearted, as winning or losing often depends on a single tempo.

14...\textit{h}5 15 \textit{xg}7 \textit{xg}7 16 \textit{dg}1 h\textit{xg}5 17 h\textit{xg}5 \textit{h}h8 (D)

Good enough, but your computer will quickly point out that 31 \textit{gh}2! is a more clinical win.

31...\textit{e}6
31...\textit{xa}3+ 32 \textit{d}2 \textit{c}3+ 33 \textit{e}2 \textit{c}4+ 34 \textit{f}2 and the king escapes the checks.

32 \textit{g}6 \textit{exf}5 33 \textit{xf}7++ \textit{xf}7 34 \textit{xf}5+ (D)

18 \textit{w}e1
18 \textit{f}4 would allow 18...\textit{d}3!?, exchanging the offside knight.

18...\textit{d}6 19 \textit{f}4 a4 20 \textit{d}1 b4 21 \textit{h}4 c5 22 dxc5 \textit{xc}5 23 \textit{d}3 \textit{ac}8 24 \textit{g}2 d4 25 f5

It is essential for both sides to open lines against the enemy king as soon as possible, even at the cost of material.

25...\textit{gxf}5?! 25...\textit{xf}5 26 exd4 \textit{wa}5 27 \textit{xf}5 \textit{xf}5 is unclear after 28 \textit{e}5+ or 28 \textit{e}3.

26 exd4 \textit{wd}5? 27 \textit{e}3! \textit{xa}2 28 \textit{xf}5+ \textit{xf}5 29 \textit{we}5+!

A clever intermezzo, forcing the king to an inferior square, before recapturing the bishop.

29...\textit{g}8 30 \textit{xf}5 a3 31 bxa3

It is fair to say that White has won the race to expose the enemy king; the black monarch is caught in no man's land, with nowhere safe to run.

34...\textit{e}7

Black’s other attempt at defence, 34...\textit{f}6 35 \textit{g}6+ \textit{e}7 36 \textit{e}2+ \textit{d}7 37 \textit{g}7+ \textit{c}6 38 \textit{xf}6+, is no better for him.

35 \textit{e}4+ \textit{d}8 36 \textit{g}5+ \textit{c}7 37 \textit{e}7+ \textit{b}8 38 \textit{xb}4+ \textit{a}8 39 \textit{a}4+ \textit{b}8 40 \textit{b}5+ \textit{a}8 41 \textit{a}5+ \textit{b}8 42 \textit{b}4+

White has been teasing Black for the last few moves, letting him know who’s boss, and now comes in for the kill!

42...\textit{a}8 43 \textit{e}5

43...\(\text{h}\text{h}7\) 44 \(\text{ge}\text{e}2\) \(\text{a}\text{a}7\) 45 \(\text{xc}\text{h}5\) \(\text{xa}\text{a}3\) 46 \(\text{b}\text{b}2\) \(\text{xb}\text{b}2+\) 47 \(\text{xb}\text{b}2\)

Black has managed to survive to the endgame, but unfortunately for him, it is completely lost.

As Black often has a problem with his light-squared bishop, it may appear logical to solve this by exchanging it, the drawback being the acceleration of White’s attack.

7 \(\text{e}\text{e}5\) \(\text{xe}\text{e}2\) 8 \(\text{xe}\text{e}2\) \(\text{c}\text{c}6\)

The number of alternatives that Black has tried hints that he has a difficult task keeping the balance:

d) Black’s other main option is 8...c5. This is an interesting hybrid of the ...\(\text{g}4\) and ...c5 systems, which White should seek to exploit immediately by 9 \(\text{wb}5\) cxd4 10 exd4, when Black has a fairly wide choice:

d1) 10...\(\text{wb}6\) 11 \(\text{wb}6\) axb6 leaves Black with permanently weak pawns, and White with at least a small advantage.

d2) 10...b6 weakens Black’s control of the light squares on the queenside. For example: 11 0-0 \(\text{bd}7\) 12 \(\text{xc}6\) \(\text{we}8\) 13 \(\text{fe}1\) \(\pm\).

d3) 10...\(\text{wc}8\) 11 \(\text{xc}d5\) \(\text{xc}d5\) 12 \(\text{wd}5\) \(\pm\).

d4) 10...\(\text{dc}6\) is critical, but is not ultimately sufficient for equality. 11 \(\text{wb}7\) \(\text{xd}4\) 12 0-0-0 \(\text{bb}8\) (12...\(\text{h}5\) 13 \(\text{xf}4\) \(\text{dc}6\) \(\pm\) 13 \(\text{xa}7\) (although it may appear dangerous for White to open lines towards his own king, he has a material advantage and Black is hard-pressed to keep the queens on) 13...\(\text{b}5\) 14 \(\text{xb}5\) \(\text{xb}5\) 15 \(\text{c}6\) \(\text{wa}8\) (avoiding the endgame is no better: 15...\(\text{we}8\) 16 \(\text{xe}7+\) {16 a4?!} 16...\(\text{h}8\) 17 \(\text{e}5\) \(\text{xe}7+\) 17 \(\text{xa}8\) \(\text{xa}8\) 18 \(\text{e}5\) \(\text{xa}2\) 19 \(\text{c}4\) \(\text{b}7\) (19...\(\text{d}4\) 20 \(\text{d}8+\); 19...\(\text{e}5\) 20 \(\text{b}1\) \(\pm\) 20 \(\text{b}1\) \(\text{xb}2+\) 21 \(\text{c}4\) \(\text{xc}5\) (22...\(\text{xb}2+\) 23 \(\text{c}1\) \(\text{a}2+\) 24 \(\text{d}1\) \(\text{xb}2\) 25 \(\text{a}5\) \(\text{d}4\) 26 \(\text{xa}2\) \(\text{b}1+\) 27 \(\text{eb}2\) \(\text{h}1\) 28 \(\text{c}6\) \(\text{f}6\) 29 \(\text{h}3\) \(\text{c}1\) 30 \(\text{a}5\) \(\text{g}7\) 31 \(\text{d}3\) \(\text{h}5\) 32 \(\text{c}2\) -- Hebden-McDonald, British Ch, Eastbourne 1991. The bishop versus knight endgame is won for White, while if Black keeps the rook, then he simply pushes his c-pawn.

We now return to the position after 8...c6 (D):

10 0-0-0 (D)

This position is a major crossroad in the Barry Attack, as it can be reached via many different and highly plausible move-orders, and play can branch out in several directions from here.

10...Qh5

This move is necessary in order for Black to slow down White’s attack. However, as the course of the game shows, while White’s dark-squared bishop is useful, it is not essential in the attack against the black king.

For Black’s alternatives 10...Qa5, 10...Qe4 and 10...Qxe5, see Game 3 and its notes. 10...Qc8 will be discussed in Game 10.

11 g4 Qxf4 12 exf4 e6

The alternative is 9...bd7, by which Black puts less pressure on the white centre, but hopes that the knight will be better placed to protect the black king. White’s chances are to be preferred after 10 hxg6 hxg6 (after 10...fxg6, 11 w2 d2! is probably best; for example, 11...xe5 12 dxe5 d7 13 gh4 x e 14 e d7 15 x d5 is much better for White) 11 w2 d2 (11 b5 will most likely transpose into the 9...c6 line) 11...e4 (as mentioned before, the c3-knight is often White’s worst-placed piece, so he has no objections to exchanging it) 12 x e4 dxe4 13 g4! (D).

This manoeuvre is well worth remembering. The arrival of the knight on h6 will often cost Black his dark-squared protector. 13...eh8 14 gh6+ xh6 (14...w8 f6 15 c4) 15 xh6 e5

11 \( \mathcal{b}5 \mathcal{c}8 \)

One of the main choices that Black has to make in the Barry Attack is whether to exchange on e5. This exchange removes one of White’s attacking pieces but, at the same time, often forces Black’s best defensive piece to give way. For example, 11...

\( \mathcal{c}xe5 \) 12 dxe5 \( \mathcal{h}5 \) (other knight moves are met by \( \mathcal{g}4 \)-h4, with a devastating attack) 13 \( \mathcal{x}h5 \)! (D).

This thematic exchange sacrifice blows open the black king’s defences. After 13...gxh5?! (he should perhaps try 13...d4, but at best this leads to a very unpleasant ending for Black) 14 \( \mathcal{x}h5 \) f5 White has two promising continuations:

a) 15 \( \mathcal{g}6 \) e6 (more or less forced, due to the threat of \( \mathcal{h}6 \); e.g., 15...a6 16 \( \mathcal{h}6 \mathcal{f}7 \) 17 e6) 16 \( \mathcal{x}e6+ \mathcal{f}7 \) 17 0-0-0 \( \mathcal{e}7 \) 18 \( \mathcal{x}e7 \mathcal{e}7 \) \( \pm \) (Black has reached an endgame the exchange up, but White has collected more than enough extra pawns) 19 \( \mathcal{c}xd5 \mathcal{x}e5 \) 19...

8...\texttt{h6}

Black has these alternatives:

a) For 8...\texttt{bd7} see the next game.

b) 8...\texttt{e8} 9 h5 f6 10 \texttt{g6}! hxg6 11 hxg6 f5 12 \texttt{d3} e6 13 \texttt{g4}! fxg4 (after 13...\texttt{c6} White decides with 14 \texttt{g5}! followed by \texttt{wh5} or \texttt{h7} and then \texttt{wh5}) 14 \texttt{wxg4} \texttt{wd7} 15 0-0-0 (15 \texttt{e5}??) 15...\texttt{e5} 16 \texttt{wh5} \texttt{xf4} 17 \texttt{exf4}

Now both recaptures give White a potent attacking position:

d1) 10 dxe5 \texttt{d7} (10...\texttt{e6}?! 11 hxg6 fxg6 12 \texttt{d3} \texttt{d7} is line ‘d12’, bypassing a sharper option for both sides, and quite dismal for Black) and then:

d11) 11 hxg6 fxg6?! (despite the obvious risks, 11...hxg6 might be a better try) 12 \text{d}3 (the beauty of White's plan in this type of position is that, despite its crude simplicity \{queen to the h-file and mate\}, Black has an ardous task to prevent it) 12...e6 13 \text{w}g4 \text{c}c5 14 \text{w}h3. White has completed his plan and Black is faced with insurmountable problems, although he fought admirably for the remainder of the game: 14...\text{c}xd3+ 15 \text{c}xd3 \text{f}7 16 \text{b}5 (White conceives a clever idea to bring his knight to g5, via d4 and f3) 16...\text{w}e7 17 \text{c}c1 \text{f}c8 (17...\text{w}b4+ 18 \text{d}1 \text{w}xb5 19 \text{x}c7+ winning) 18 \text{e}2 (18...\text{x}h7?? \text{h}8 19 \text{x}c7 ++) 18...\text{a}6 19 \text{d}4 c5 20 \text{f}3 (with the knight's arrival, Black's position collapses) 20...\text{h}6 21 \text{x}h6 \text{h}8 22 \text{g}5+ \text{e}8 23 \text{x}e6 \text{w}xe6 24 \text{x}e6 \text{a}xe5 25 \text{f}4 \text{f}7 26 \text{h}h8 1-0 Rogers-J.Pribyl, Tallinn 1985.

d12) White played directly in Hermlin-Kiltti, Tampere 1996: 11 \text{e}6!? (D).

A thematic sacrifice – at the cost of the front e-pawn White weakens the black kingside. The game concluded 11...\text{f}xe6 (11...\text{c}c5?! is possible, as Black's central control will compensate for his damaged kingside structure) 12 \text{h}xg6 h\text{g}6 13 \text{d}3 \text{f}6? (Black has to try 13...d4, which is far from clear; 13...e5? 14 \text{x}g6 \text{ex}f4 15 \text{h}7 \text{f}7 16 \text{h}5+ \text{e}6 17 \text{b}5 is a disaster for Black) 14 \text{w}g4 \text{f}7 15 0-0-0 \text{c}5 16 \text{h}7 \text{d}f3 17 \text{c}xd3+ 17 \text{c}xd3 \text{g}8 18 \text{d}h1 \text{d}7 19 \text{h}3 1-0. \text{d}22) 10...\text{d}7 11 \text{x}g7 \text{g}7 12 \text{w}d2 (with the removal of Black's dark-squared bishop, White can now lay siege to the very squares that this piece defended) 12...\text{f}6 (12...\text{h}8 13 0-0-0 \text{f}6 14 \text{g}4 \pm Weinzettl-Hertel, Seefeld 2001) 13 \text{f}4 \text{c}5 14 \text{g}4 \text{w}c8 15 \text{g}5 \text{h}5 16 \text{x}h5 \text{x}h5 17 0-0-0 (as so often happens in the Barry Attack, Black is left with a permanent weakness on the h-file, and an insecure king) 17...\text{f}5 18 \text{x}h5 \text{h}8 19 \text{d}h1 \text{a}c8 20 \text{e}2 (one of the recurrent themes in the Barry Attack is the improvement of White's worst-placed piece, usually the knight on c3; when this unit is included in the attack, it is often too hot to handle) 20...\text{x}d4 21 \text{g}3 \text{g}4 22 \text{x}d4+ \text{g}8 23 \text{x}h8!! \text{x}h8 24 \text{h}h7+ \text{g}8 25 \text{h}8+ \text{g}7 26 \text{h}7+ \text{g}6 27 \text{h}6+ \text{g}7 28 \text{h}5+ \text{x}h5 29 \text{f}8+ 1-0 J.Pribyl- Mi.Horvath, Prague 1987.

David Norwood originally suggested this sacrifice as an improvement on his game against Jonathan Mestel from the 1988 British Championship, in which he adopted the inferior 9 g4. Certainly, practical results have heavily favoured White from the above diagram. Funnily enough, in a set of light-hearted notes in the tournament bulletin, Andrew Martin gently ribbed Norwood for his unsuccessful caveman act, writing “Dave has been watching too much Batman.” Given that the correct solution involved a more violent approach, we can say that he should have been watching more Batman!

\textbf{10...\textsf{\texttt{Xg5}} 11 h6}

Now Black has to decide whether to retreat or to stand and fight.

\textbf{11...\textsf{\texttt{Xh8}}}

Black tries to hang on to his extra material, but his avarice will lead to his demise. It is more sensible to return the piece with 11...\textsf{\texttt{Xh6}} 12 \textsf{\texttt{Xh6}} \textsf{\texttt{Gg7}} 13 \textsf{\texttt{Xh3}}. This has fared poorly in practice, but may not be as bad as its reputation. The analysis is as follows:

a) 13 \textsf{\texttt{Cd4}} 14 \textsf{\texttt{Xxe4}} \textsf{\texttt{Xxe4}} 15 \textsf{\texttt{Cc4}} \textsf{\texttt{C8}} 1-0 Laszlo-Kanyadi, Debrecen Ch 1994. Black did not want to wait for 16 \textsf{\texttt{Wh5}} (or 16 \textsf{\texttt{Xh7+}}), with a mating attack.

b) 13...\textsf{\texttt{Bbd7}} 14 \textsf{\texttt{Xg3}} \textsf{\texttt{Xh7}} 15 \textsf{\texttt{Xd3}} f5 (15...f6 16 \textsf{\texttt{Wh5}}) 16 \textsf{\texttt{Cf3}} g4 17 \textsf{\texttt{Wh2}} \textsf{\texttt{Xh8}} 18 \textsf{\texttt{Ce2??}}! (18 \textsf{\texttt{Xg4!}} fxg4 19 \textsf{\texttt{Xh7}} smashes through) 18...e5? (18...e5 would have muddied the water) 19 \textsf{\texttt{Cf4}} \textsf{\texttt{Wf6}} 20 \textsf{\texttt{Xg4}} fxg4 21 \textsf{\texttt{Xg4}} \textsf{\texttt{Xf7}} 22 \textsf{\texttt{Cd6+}} \textsf{\texttt{Xg7}} 23 \textsf{\texttt{Cf5+}} \textsf{\texttt{Xf8}} 24 \textsf{\texttt{Cxd7+}} \textsf{\texttt{Xxd7}} 25 \textsf{\texttt{Xf3}} 1-0 J.Christensen-M.S.Hansen, Arhus 1990.

c) 13...\textsf{\texttt{Xh8!}} 14 \textsf{\texttt{Xg3}} \textsf{\texttt{Xh1+}} 15 \textsf{\texttt{Xf1}} \textsf{\texttt{Xh7}} 16 \textsf{\texttt{Cf3}} f6 17 \textsf{\texttt{Cf3}} \textsf{\texttt{Xf7}} 18 0-0-0 \textsf{\texttt{Xf8}} is given as ‘unclear’ by Norwood, but surely Black’s more exposed king and weakened pawn-structure must give White some advantage.

\textbf{12 \textsf{\texttt{Xh7+}} \textsf{\texttt{Xg7}}}

This is critical, but White gets more than sufficient compensation for the piece.

The alternative is to capture the annoying h-pawn by 12...\textsf{\texttt{Xh7?}} but this move is simply unplayable. 13 \textsf{\texttt{Ca6!}} is the refutation: 13...\textsf{\texttt{Cc8}} (13...\textsf{\texttt{Xa6}} 14 \textsf{\texttt{Wh5}} ++) and now 14 \textsf{\texttt{Wh5!}} forces a speedy mate (e.g., 14...\textsf{\texttt{Xf5}} 15 \textsf{\texttt{Cd3?!}} \[ c8 16 \text{d}g6!?). This trap is still waiting to be sprung.

13 \text{d}3

White’s attack is quite slow-burning, although incredibly difficult to stop. As usual, White’s plan is to bring his queen to the h-file and go for the kill.

13...

Black has tried to improve with 13...e6 but after 14 \text{f}3 (the untested 14 f4! may be even stronger; e.g., 14...g4 15 \text{x}g4 and White is clearly better) White’s chances are still preferable:

a) 14...\text{d}7 15 \text{h}5 \text{f}6 16 f4 \text{e}7 17 \text{x}g5+ \text{e}8 18 \text{h}5 \text{x}e5 19 fxe5 \text{d}7 20 0-0-0 \text{a}6 21 e4 and in Breivik-Candela Perez, Linares 2005 it was clear that White had more than enough compensation for his piece.

b) After 14...\text{e}8 White has reached promising positions with 15 \text{h}3 and 15 0-0-0 but Rybka suggests 15 \text{h}5!. Capturing the rook leads to mate in two so Black’s main options are 15..\text{f}8 16 \text{x}g5 \text{e}7 17 0-0-0 \text{d}7 18 \text{f}4 and 15...g4 16 \text{g}5+ \text{f}8 17 \text{x}g4 \text{e}7 18 \text{f}4 \text{f}8 19 g4, when White has a very promising long-term attack against Black’s centralized king in both cases.

14 \text{f}3 \text{d}d3 15 cxd3 \text{d}d6
15...e6 16 \text{h}3 +-; 15...\text{c}8 16 \text{d}d5 \text{d}d5 17 \text{h}5 +-.

16 \text{f}5 \text{d}d8 17 \text{x}g5+ \text{f}8 18 \text{e}2

Despite Black’s extra piece, he is in a hopeless position. The pawn on h7 is a monster and the black king has no effective escape-route.

18...a6 19 \text{h}6 \text{d}d7 20 \text{h}1 \text{e}6 21 \text{h}4 (D)

White is winning.

21...

22 \text{g}4 was the threat.

22 dxe5 \text{e}8 23 exf6 exf6 24 \text{g}3 \text{e}7 25 \text{x}c7+ \text{d}7 26 \text{g}3 \text{e}8 1-0

Black decided that he had seen enough, since White has regained his sacrificed material with interest, whilst all of Black’s problems remain.

Black has also tried:

a) 9...a6 10 hxg6 hxg6 11 \text{g}4 \text{d}xe5 12 dxe5 \text{e}4 13 \text{f}3 f5 14 exf6
\text{xf}6 15 \text{xe}4 dxe4 16 \text{h}3 \text{d}5 17
\text{d}1 gave White a decisive initiative in the game Kogan-Kobese, Almassora 2000.
b) 9...c5 10 hxg6 hxg6 11 \( \text{b5} \) \( \text{wc8} \) 12 \( \text{xd7} \) \( \text{xd7} \) 13 \( \text{g4} \) \( \text{xex5} \) 14 \( \text{wh4} \) f6 15 dxe5 \( \text{f7} \) 16 \( \text{g3} \) \( \pm \) Chat- albashev-Cebalo, Saint Vincent 2000.

10...\( \text{dxe5} \)

10...\( \text{dxe5} \) has also been played successfully, but the text-move is more forcing.

10...\( \text{dxe5} \)

10...\( \text{dxe5} \) is the other move to have been used in practice. It transposes to move 10...\( \text{dxe5} \) in the previous game.

11 hxg6 hxg6 12 \( \text{d3} \) \( \text{e8} \)

The capture on c3, 12...\( \text{xc3} \) 13 bxc3, doesn’t seem to improve Black’s chances significantly. Here is a sample variation: 13...\( \text{wd7} \) 14 \( \text{f3} \) \( \text{e6} \) 15 \( \text{g3} \) (with the idea of \( \text{wh2} \)) 15...f5 16 \( \text{xf6} \) \( \text{xf6} \) 17 0-0 0 e5 (17...e6 18 \( \text{e5} \) \( \text{xe5} \) 19 \( \text{xe6} \) \( \text{f5} \) 20 g4 \( += \)) 18 \( \text{xe5} \) \( \text{xe5} \) 19 \( \text{xe5} \) \( \text{xe5} \) 20 \( \text{h8+} \) \( \text{xh8} \) 21 \( \text{h7#} \).

13 \( \text{f3} \) \( \text{e6} \) 14 \( \text{b5} \)

As this move doesn’t lead to much for White, I recommend taking the pawn by 14 \( \text{xe4} \) \( \text{dxe4} \) 15 \( \text{xe4} \) \( \text{xe4} \) 16 \( \text{xe4} \) \( \pm \). White is a pawn to the good and retains attacking chances against the black king; e.g.:

a) 16...\( \text{f5} \) 17 \( \text{f3} \) \( \text{xe5} \) 18 \( \text{h3} \) (18 0-0 0!? 18...\( \text{f7} \) !? (18...\( \text{g7} \) is more resilient) 19 \( \text{xe5} \) \( \text{xe5} \) 20 0-0 0 \( \pm \) with the idea of tripling major pieces on the h-file.

c) 16...\( \text{ad8} \) 17 0-0 (White could try 17 \( \text{g3} \) !? or 17 \( \text{g5} \) !?) 17...f5 18

As Black has a firm stance in the centre, the loss of his dark-squared bishop is not a serious problem and he is able to neutralize White’s kingside initiative.

This is a flexible system for Black, who keeps his options open. Black retains the possibility of queenside expansion and of developing his bishop to g4. Meanwhile 7 \text{#} \text{e5} can be answered by 7...\text{#} \text{fd7}!. The main drawback is Black’s lack of pressure on the centre, so a flank attack becomes a more attractive option for White.

7...\text{#} \text{g4} \\
This really doesn’t help Black, as it leads to the type of position we have seen before under 6...\text{#} \text{g4}. I have given it detailed coverage, as it is the sort of move that for many players will be an automatic response, and besides, having suffered myself as White in so many classical King’s Indian mating attacks, it is always nice to see Black getting a taste of his own medicine! The other possibilities are:

a) After 7...\text{#} \text{b6 } 8 \text{a3} play can develop along the same lines as in Game 4, Hodgson-Wolff, except this time it will be harder for Black to harass the white bishop.

b) 7...c5! is a rare and provocative move. Black argues he can spend a tempo playing ...c5, because h4 achieves little for White if he castles kingside. 8 \text{#} \text{e5 } \text{#} \text{c6 } 9 \text{h5} (9 \text{#} \text{d2}?!)

d) 7...b5 is an attempt to take the game down unexplored channels. After 8 dxe5 Black has tried:

d1) After 8...dxe5 9 h5 g5 in Welling-Rybenko, Saint Vincent 2004, White accepted the challenge with 10 dxe5!? f6 11 h6 h8 12 f4 fxe5 13 dxe5 and developed a promising kingside attack: 13...d7 14 d3 (it’s possible that White should contest f7 by 14 h5?!) 14...f7 15 h5 f8? (15...e6 or 15...e8 is more robust) 16 0-0-0? (16 h7 h8 17 g6 f7 18 h7 e8 19 g8+ f8 20 h6 ±) 16...e6, with an unclear position.

d2) 8...b4 9 d4 d7 10 h5 xe5 11 e5 f6 and now:

d21) 12 g3? was chosen when this position was seen in practice, but I feel Black equalizes comfortably with 12...e5, viz. 13 hxg6 hxg6 14 c5 e7 15 d2 a5 16 0-0-0 d7 17 xd7 xd7 and Black had sufficient counterplay in G.Buckley-Fogarasi, Guildford 1991.

d22) 12 xb8 is my recommended improvement. It may seem strange to give up the bishop-pair and take an undeveloped knight. The key point is that White has an outpost on c5 and therefore capturing on b8 removes a possible defender of that square and provides the extra tempo that White needs to induce additional weakness on the black kingside. After 12...xb8 13 hxg6 hxg6 14 d3 e8 (14...f5 15 f4 gives White a clear positional advantage because White’s minor pieces are evidently superior to their black counterparts) 15 f3 e5 16 g3 ± White has the upper hand due to his outpost on c5 and kingside attacking chances. This is widely believed to be Black’s best answer to the Barry Attack. Barry exponent Mark Hebden plays it himself as Black, Joe Gallagher recommended it in his book \textit{Beating the Anti-King’s Indians} and John Nunn, a highly respected theoretician, also uses this line.

7 \texttt{e5} \texttt{c6} 8 \texttt{Wd2}

I have included this game to serve as a warning to any bloodthirsty hackers who insist on trying to mate their opponent’s king no matter what! Unfortunately, this tunnel-visioned approach just does not work when Black counterattacks vigorously in the centre and on the queenside.

8...\texttt{wa5} 9 \texttt{h4 d7} 10 0-0-0? \texttt{dxe5} 11 \texttt{dxe5 d4}

It is Black’s ability to play disruptive central breaks like this, in conjunction with a queenside attack, which makes overt aggression by White less viable.

12 \texttt{exd4 cxd4} 13 \texttt{b1 xa2}

This is a very sad sight for any Barry player. Black’s queenside attack looks far stronger than the white kingside effort, the pawn on e5 is weak and Black is a pawn up, to boot.

14 \texttt{h5 f5} (D)

15 \texttt{d3}

This time, it is White who attempts to relieve the mounting pressure on his position with exchanges. In this example, it is a case of too little, too late!

\(\text{B}\text{fd}7\)

Nunn varies from the plan used in his earlier game with Hebden (see Game 13). Practice has seen two other approaches for Black here, apart from moves which transpose to variations we have already examined:

a) 8...\(\text{B}\text{bd}7\) puts insufficient pressure on White’s centre and again allows White to pursue a more aggressive plan. After 9 h4 \(\text{B}\text{xe}5\) (9...\(\text{B}\text{e}4\)?) 10 \(\text{B}x\text{e}5\) a6 11 h5 b5 12 a3 \(\text{B}\text{e}6\) 13 \(\text{W}\text{d}2\) \(\text{W}d7\) 14 f3 \(\text{W}b7\) 15 \(\text{B}\text{f}2\) (15 g4?!) 15...\(\text{B}\text{ac}8\) (15...\(\text{B}\text{b}6\) is a better attempt to disrupt White’s attack; although Black has played natural moves, his queenside counterplay simply lacks bite; meanwhile, White can assemble his forces at his own leisure on the kingside) 16 \(\text{B}\text{d}3\) \(\text{W}d7\) 17 \(\text{B}\text{h}4\) \(\text{B}\text{f}5\) 18 \(\text{B}x\text{f}5\) \(\text{W}x\text{f}5\) 19 g4 \(\text{W}d7\) 20 \(\text{B}\text{ah}1\).

White has established an impressive attacking position and starts to move in for the kill; the daunting task facing Black can be shown by the following variations, illustrating White’s attacking plan:

a1) 20...\(\text{B}x\text{h}5\)?? (Black cracks under the pressure of White’s attack) 21 \(\text{B}x\text{f}6\) \(\text{B}x\text{f}6\) 22 \(\text{B}x\text{h}5\) \(\text{B}d8\) 23 \(\text{B}\text{h}7\) \(\text{g}7\) 24 \(\text{B}x\text{g}7+\) 1-0 M.Přibyl-Přibyl-

Then Black has nothing better than giving back a piece by 25...h5 26 wh5 when White has the stronger minor pieces and two connected passed pawns for the exchange.

15 h6

This is an important theme, because White assures himself of the better bishop. White is seeking to accumulate small advantages, à la Steinitz, which can be an effective way of increasing a positional edge.

15...xh6 16 wh6 (D)

White occupies an excellent outpost. Now the main question is who can make more of their passed pawn.

24 f5 25 a3 d4

If Black is to stay in the game, he must play actively. This move is correct, but needs to be followed up accurately, and in practice this increases the chance of an error, even in a high-level game such as this.

Game 14 continues:

1 d4 f6 2 f3 g6 3 c3 d5 4 f4
g7 5 e3 0-0 6 e2 c5 7 e5 c6 8 0-0 (D)
This is a more sensible approach than we saw in Game 11, if a little sedate. Instead of wielding the axe, White plays for a small positional disadvantage.

8...cxd4

Black has also tried:

a) 8...b6? loses a pawn to 9 a4.

b) 8...f5 is Gallagher’s recommendation and indeed is a very solid option, although uninspiring for Black. After 9 d2 cxd4 10 exd4 Black has:

b1) 10...b6 11 c6 leads to positions similar to this or the previous game, depending on Black’s recapture.

b2) 10...e4 11 xe4 xe4 (if 11...dxe4, then 12 c6 bxc6 13 c3 ±) is an attempt by Black to benefit from the fact that White has no knight to land on c5, and so reach an improved version of Game 13. However, there is a tactical drawback, in that the bishop on e4 is woefully short of squares after 12 c6 bxc6 13 g4! b6 14 c3, when Black must lose material due to the threat of f3.

b3) 10...d7 11 d5 dxe5 12 dxe5 xc2 (12...xe5 13 ad1 e6 14 xe3 xd2 15 xd2 e4 16 fd1 is slightly better for White due to his control of the d-file) 13 f3 f5 14 e3 e6 15 fd1 xd5 16 xd5 b6 17 xb6 axb6 18 b5 ± Hebden-Fernandez Garcia, Linares Zonal 1995. In conjunction with Black’s queenside pawn weaknesses, White enjoys the advantage of the bishop-pair.

9 exd4 b6 10 c6 c6 11 b5 b6 12 a4

White threatens simply to gain space on the queenside with a5, when the black queen will be embarrassed for decent squares. In the original edition of this book, analysis stopped here with the conclusion ‘±’.

12...a5!

This suggestion by Prié might be enough to hold the theoretical balance. Other continuations give White a pleasant edge:

a) 12 h5 13 g5 d6 14 e1 e6 15 a5 h6 16 e3 f6 17 d2 g5 18 f3 a6 19 d3 ± Hebden-Gladyszew, Marseilles 2006.

c) After 12...a6 13 a5 d8 14 e2 White’s position is visually pleasing and although he hasn’t proved much in any of the examples, it isn’t hard to find alternative tries:
c1) 14...\( \text{f5} \) 15 \( \text{e5} \) (Rybka prefers the somewhat loosening 15 g4?!)

We now return to the position after 12...\( \text{wa5} \) (D):

13 \( \text{e5} \)?

Objectively this may offer no more than the alternatives but one advantage of White’s marginally more comfortable position is that it’s relatively easy to find playable alternatives to those defused by theory.

a) It’s food for thought that two years later Brousek deviated from this game with 13 \( \text{wd2} \) a6 14 \( \text{d3} \) \( \text{h5} \) 15 \( \text{h6} \) \( \text{e8} \) 16 \( \text{xg7} \) \( \text{xg7} \) 17 \( \text{fe1} \)

19 a5 \( \text{wa7} \)?! 20 \( \text{a4} \)

This position nicely illustrates what White can hope for when playing 12 a4. His queenside grip is just on the verge of turning into something tangible. Black needs to improve over his last few moves if he wants to demonstrate that his position is playable.

20...\( \text{d7} \) 21 \( \text{xg7} \) \( \text{yg7} \) 22 \( \text{ec5} \)
\( \text{xc5} \) 23 bxc5

White is close to winning, not so much because of his terrible threats – they are actually quite modest – but because of Black’s lack of any active play.

28 cxd5 \( \text{xd5} \) 29 \( \text{c2} \) is just as hopeless.

2 150 Attack

Introduction

The 150 Attack is a system for White against all Modern and Pirc Defence players. We shall examine all the ways Black can reach his desired set-up, whether it be from a Barry Attack move-order (1 d4 ♞f6 2 ♞f3 g6 3 ♞c3 ♞g7 4 e4 d6 5 ♞e3), or otherwise. I used to play the Pirc Defence in order to lure White onto unfamiliar territory from an early stage. I suspect that, like myself, the majority of club players who try the Pirc or Modern Defence do so because they are intimidated by the more usual mainline openings. By opting out, Black has greater opportunities to confuse White with his various move-orders, which are hard to pin down.

What White needs is a simple, yet effective response, which can be used against any black system. The 150 Attack fits the bill perfectly. White negotiates the course of events on his own terms. I feel the 150 Attack is putting Black off playing the Pirc/Modern Defences at all levels. It has been successfully adopted by the world’s elite, such as Kasparov, Anand, Topalov and Leko, to name just a few. To whet your appetite, here is an attractive white victory, from a super-grandmaster clash.

Leko – Beliavsky
Madrid 1998

1 d4 d6 2 e4 ♞f6 3 ♞c3 g6 4 ♞f3

We shall concentrate on this knight development as our primary move-order is 1 d4 ♞f6 2 ♞f3 g6 3 ♞c3, which commits the knight to f3 straight away. If Black uses a 1...g6 or 1...d6 move-order he must also be prepared for lines where White plays an early f3 or f4.

4...♗g7 5 ♞e3 (D)

This is White’s basic set-up in the 150 Attack. The 150 Attack supposedly got its name because it was widely used by a lot of medium-strength club and tournament players in Britain (an English grading of 150 is roughly equivalent to 1800 Elo) and because its ideas were simple enough that it was a very dangerous weapon even in the hands of mid-ranking players. The basic idea was to exchange the dark-squared bishops and play for a mating attack on the black king. Since then, it has become much more refined, but we still have the unusual case of the world’s grandmasters and super-grandmasters borrowing the ideas of lesser players!

5...c6
5...0-0 is an important possibility, which we shall consider in Game 16.

6...\textit{d}\textit{2} b5

Even positional players like to use the 150 Attack, although in their case it is sometimes a bluff. White sets up an attacking formation pointing towards Black’s kingside. The automatic response for Black is this counter-stroke on the queenside. However, then White can suddenly change tack, castle on the kingside, and set about exploiting the queenside weaknesses left by Black’s pawn advances. This time it is Black who is left bewildered and confused!

The reason for this is that while White’s moves are direct and aggressive, they are useful moves that fit in well in a wide variety of plans: he may be \textit{intending} to attack the black king, but he has not burned any boats by \textit{committing} himself to doing so.

7 \textit{d}d3 \textit{g}4 8 e5! (D)

8 \textit{h}4 is also possible (and it is examined in Game 18, together with many other options on the preceding moves), but the text-move is obviously more potent. The advance e5 often plays a key role in White’s victories in the 150 Attack.

150 Attack vs the Pirc Defence: Black Delays ...0-0

A decade ago, delaying castling against the 150 Attack was a refinement mainly used by grandmasters. But the idea has steadily crept down the rating ladder and today it’s standard procedure even at club level.

Game 17

1 d4 Wf6 2 Wf3 g6

For King’s Indian players (in contrast to Grünfeld players), 2...d6 is an alternative move-order. This gives the extra option of 3 Wc3 Wh5!?. However, after 4 Whg5 White is able to keep his initiative:

1...\texttt{e}4 \texttt{d}6 2...\texttt{d}4 \texttt{f}6 3...\texttt{c}3 \texttt{g}6 4...\texttt{e}3 \texttt{c}6!?

Black delays not only castling but also...\texttt{g}7. This way Black discourages \texttt{h}6, which after...\texttt{h}xh6 will now leave White a tempo down on lines we have already examined. Objectively this may be one of Black’s best options against the 150 Attack. However, it’s also an approach which takes considerable skill and courage as Black is two moves away from castling and must constantly watch out for central breaks that may embarrass his king at the cost of a pawn or two.

4...\texttt{a}6!? is a related idea, delaying castling and preparing...\texttt{b}5. However, Black is somewhat more vulnerable than in the similar positions after 1...\texttt{d}4 \texttt{g}6 2...\texttt{e}4 \texttt{g}7 3...\texttt{c}3 \texttt{d}6 4...\texttt{e}3 \texttt{a}6 as the knight on \texttt{f}6 may be kicked with a well-timed \texttt{e}5. After 5...\texttt{d}2 \texttt{b}5 6...\texttt{f}3 \texttt{bd}7 7...\texttt{a}4 \texttt{b}4 8...\texttt{d}1 Black has tried:

a) 8...\texttt{b}8 9...\texttt{d}3 \texttt{c}5 10...\texttt{c}3 \texttt{bxc}3 11...\texttt{bxc}3 \texttt{g}7 12...\texttt{e}2 0-0 13...\texttt{b}5 0-0 \texttt{wa}5 14...\texttt{f}2 \texttt{e}5 15...\texttt{g}5 16...\texttt{c}2 \texttt{c}7 17...\texttt{c}4 ...\texttt{f}4 18...\texttt{ab}1 \texttt{xe}2+ 19...\texttt{xe}2 \texttt{xb}1 20...\texttt{xb}1 ± K.Lutz-Margolin, Germany tt 1999/00.
b) 8...a5 9 c3 bxc3 10 bxc3 \(\text{\text{g7}}\) 11 \(\text{d3}\) 0-0 12 \(\text{e2}\) \(\text{a6}\) 13 \(\text{f2}\) \(\text{xd3}\) 14 \(\text{wxd3}\) \(\text{b6}\) 15 0-0 \(\text{wd7}\) 16 \(\text{c4}\) \(\text{xa4}\) 17 \(\text{e2}\) (17 e5?) 17...\(\text{b6}\) 18 c5 gave White more than enough compensation for his pawn in R.Pert-Bitansky, Witley 2000.

c) After 8...e6 9 \(\text{h3}\) c5 10 a5 cxd4 11 \(\text{xd4}\) e5 12 \(\text{f2}\) White was clearly better in Chandler-Atzmon Simon, Sydney 2007 as Black was unable to free his position with ...d5 (although that was exactly what he tried to do!).

5 \(\text{wd2}\)

This fits best into our repertoire. But if you consider expanding your repertoire, you could investigate 5 \(\text{h3}\)? followed by 6 f4, which is a kind of Austrian Attack in which Black really needs to play ...c5 in order to gain counterplay. This is probably the line that has done most to put players off 4...c6.

5...\(\text{bd7}\)

This appears the most solid. Black plays for ...e5 without weakening himself. Yet there is something to be said for the space-gaining 5...b5 too. After 6 \(\text{d3}\) \(\text{bd7}\) 7 \(\text{f3}\) Black has tried:

a) 7...\(\text{g7}\) is no problem for White as he has made no concessions and is ready to play along known lines with 8 \(\text{h6}\).

b) 7...\(\text{c7}\) 8 0-0 e5 9 dxe5 dxe5 10 \(\text{h3}\) \(\text{c5}\) 11 b4 \(\text{e6}\) 12 a4 \(\pm\) Tkachev-Galdunts, French Team Ch, Gonneville l’Orcher 2007.

c) 7...e5 8 dxe5 dxe5 9 \(\text{h3}\) \(\text{b7}\)? (9...\(\text{g7}\) transposes to the position after Black’s 11th move in Game 18) 10 0-0 \(\text{g7}\) 11 a4 a6 12 \(\text{e2}\) \(\text{e7}\) 13 \(\text{g3}\) 0-0 14 \(\text{c4}\) \(\text{fd8}\) (14...b4 15 \(\text{c5}\) a5 16 \(\text{c2}\) \(\text{fd8}\) 17 \(\text{fd1}\) \(\text{f8}\) 18 \(\text{ac1}\) \(\text{e8}\) 19 \(\text{c4}\) \(\pm\) Nguyen Anh Dung-Villamayor, Bangkok 2004) 15 axb5 cxb5 16 cxb5 axb5 17 \(\text{xa8}\) \(\text{a8}\) 18 \(\text{a5}\) \(\pm\) Adams-M.Gurevich, Wijk aan Zee 2002.

We now return to 5...\(\text{bd7}\) (D):

6 \(\text{f3}\) e5

Or 6...\(\text{c7}\) 7 \(\text{d3}\) e5 8 0-0, with these options:

a) After 8...\(\text{g4}\) 9 \(\text{c4}\) \(\text{g7}\)?, as in the game Kasparov-Azmaiparashvili, Rethymnon blitz 2003, it seems White could have gained a clear advantage by 10 \(\text{g5}\)! with the tactical point 10...0-0 11 \(\text{e6}\).

b) 8...\(\text{g7}\) 9 dxe5 \(\text{xe5}\) 10 \(\text{xe5}\) dxe5 11 a4 \(\text{e6}\) and now 12 a5 0-0 13 \(\text{a4}\) \(\text{d7}\) 14 b4 b5 15 \(\text{c5}\) \(\text{xc5}\) 16 \(\text{xc5}\) \(\text{fd8}\) was fairly equal in Watzkin-McNab, London 1998. Possibly White should try 12 \(\text{c5}\)!?

7 \(\text{h3}\)

This sensible, non-committal move, which stops ...\(\text{g4}\) ideas and can be useful support for a later g4 attack, is White’s most popular choice. Yet the critical test may be 7 a4!, attempting to take advantage of Black’s uncastled king:

a) Somewhat surprisingly, 7...g7, which sensibly prepares to castle, allows White a very promising attack: 8 dxe5 dxe5 9 xf7+!? (calmer approaches are also possible, of course) 9...xf7 10 g5+ gives Black an unpleasant choice:

   a1) According to Vigus, 10...e7 11 0-0-0 c7 (Kupreichik-Slobodjan, Meisdorf 1996) 12 f4 gives White very reasonable compensation.

   a2) 10...g8 11 d3 b5 12 a5! a6 13 c3 a6 14 d6 e8 15 0-0-0 also seems to give White at least enough compensation.

b) 7...b5 8 dxe5 dxe5 9 b3! (not 9 xf7+? xf7 10 xe5+ g8 11 xc6 e8=) is extremely good for White: 9...b4 (9...a5? 10 g5+-; 9...g7 10 d6=) 10 h6 xe4 11 we3 f5 12 g7 c5 13 h6 xf2+ 14 f1 wb6 15 xe4 xe4 16 xe8 a6 17 f7+ xf7 18 xe5+ e8 19 b4 xe5 20 xe5 and White is much better.

7...e7
Or:

a) 7...b5 transposes to note ‘c’ to Black’s 5th move above.

b) 7...g7 8 h6 0-0 9 xg7 xe8 10 0-0-0 e8 11 g4 b5 12 g5 h5 13 e2 wb6 14 g3 xg3 15 fxg3 exd4 16 xd4 c5 17 g2± Landa-Rudolf, European Clubs Cup, Rethymnon 2003.

8...g7

Now there is a lot of risk and little to achieve by delaying kingside castling. It’s worth noting that 8...b5 can be met with 9 a5 cxb5 10 xb5; e.g., 10...b8 11 c7+ d8 12 a5 b6 13 b5 exd4 14 xd6 and White wins.

9 h6 0-0 10 d3 e8
Or 10...b5 11 g4 (11 b1) 11...b7 12 h1 d8 13 de1 c5 14 xg7 xg7 15 g5 h5 16 dxe5 xe5 17 e2 dc4 18 xc4 bxc4 19 d5 xd5 20 exd5± Gommers-Cekro, Belgian Team Ch 2003/4.

11 h1 b5 12 e2
This direct plan is probably better than 12 b1 b7 13 e2 a6 14 g3, as in Szalanczy-C.Horvath, Hungarian Ch, Budapest 1989. The knight has a job to do on the kingside.

12 a6 13 g4 c5 14 c3 exd4 15 xg7 xg7 16 cxd4 exd4 17 fxd4 c5 18 g3 g8

Although it doesn’t play a major role in the conclusion of the game, it seems more prudent to eliminate the dangerous light-squared bishop when given the chance.

20 f3?!
The simple tactical trick 20 \( \text{d}f5\)! is pretty much decisive.

150 Attack vs the Modern Defence (Black delays or omits \( \text{f}6\))

Game 20
Krasenkov – Vokač
Pardubice 1994

1 d4 d6 2 e4 g6 3 \( \text{c}3\) \( \text{g}7\) 4 \( \text{e}3\) a6 (D)

This continuation has been growing in popularity lately – probably due to its recommendation by Tiger Hillarp

Persson. Black keeps his kingside options open while preparing queenside counterplay. White’s standard \( \text{h}6\) idea will not be possible before Black moves his knight from g8.

5 \( \text{f}3\)

It’s worth noting that although there is no strong incentive in the Modern move-order 1 d4 g6 2 e4 d6 for White to play an early \( \text{f}3\) (putting the f-pawn on f3 or f4 may be quite attractive), we shall concentrate on this set-up here too, as otherwise an early \( \text{f}6\) from Black might lead us into unknown territory.

Let’s note that the move-order of the actual game was 1 d4 g6 2 e4 \( \text{g}7\) 3 \( \text{f}3\) d6 4 \( \text{c}3\) a6 5 \( \text{e}3\).

5...b5

This is the logical follow-up to Black’s previous move. Other options:

a) 5...\( \text{f}6\) leads back to Pirc positions.

b) 5...\( \text{g}4\) is an attempt to take the game back to the realms of the Classical Variation, but the loss of tempo should give White at least a small advantage; for example, 6 \( \text{e}2\) \[ \text{c6 7 d5 } \text{xf3 8 } \text{xf3 } \text{e5 9 e2 f6 10 0-0 0-0 11 a4 and Black has difficulty creating counterplay without moving his c-pawn, which enables White to prepare to fix a weakness on b6, and simultaneously gain space on the queenside. \[ \text{c) 5...e6 signals that Black is heading for the ‘Hippopotamus’, in which he places many of his pawns on his third rank and his minor pieces on his second rank. Black doesn’t really try to equalize, but he keeps the pieces on the board and delays the real fight to the middlegame. After 6 } \text{d2 b6 7 } \text{e2 b7 8 0-0 d7 9 fe1 h6 (Black often plays this move in order to stop } \text{h6 but will now have problems castling kingside; 9...e7 is a sensible alternative) 10 h3 e7 11 f1 g5 12 a4 g6 13 d5 e5 14 e2 f6 15 g3} \]

\[ \text{White had clearly the better prospects in Vink-Radjabov, Wijk aan Zee 2001 (but Black won the game!).} \]

\[ \text{d) 5...d7 is a flexible move which may transpose to the main game after a later ...b5. In Benjamin-D’Costa, Bunratty 2005, after 6 d3 Black went for another version of the Hippo with 6...e6: 7 } \text{d2 h6 8 h3 e7 9 0-0 b6 10 ad1 b7 11 e2 c5 12 g3 wc7 13 c3 b5 14 fe1 e5 15 b3 } \pm . \]

\[ \text{6 d2 b7 7 d3 d7 8 a4 (D) } \]

\[ \text{This is an extremely important pawn-lever in the 150 Attack. Black is faced with the unpleasant choice of capturing on a4, or protecting his b-pawn with ...c6, or else advancing to b4.} \]

\[ \text{8...b4} \]

\[ \text{This is the most popular, driving the knight away from c3, but it still leaves Black with queenside weaknesses, which White can seek to exploit.} \]

\[ \text{a) 8...xa4 just leaves Black saddled with a permanently weak a-pawn.} \]

\[ \text{b) 8...c6 makes more sense, but blocks in the light-squared bishop and leaves Black potentially vulnerable to a capture on b5, followed by d5.} \]

\[ \text{9 e2 gf6} \]

\[ \text{Black eventually has to complete kingside development and it’s natural to do so with an attack on e4, but actually protecting the b-pawn – directly or indirectly – has been more popular:} \]

\[ \text{a) After 9...b8 White has made no headway with 10 g3!? so probably 10 0-0 should be explored further:} \] a1) 10...e6 11  \( \text{Ad1} \)  \( \text{De7} \) 12  \( \text{rg3} \) must be at least a little better for White.

a2) 10...\( \text{Qg6?!} \) 11 e5  \( \text{Qg4} \) (White is much better after 11...dxe5 12 dxe5  \( \text{Qg4} \) 13 e6 fx6 14  \( \text{Qg5} \) 12 e6 fx6 13  \( \text{Qg5} \)  \( \text{Qf8} \) 14  \( \text{Qf4} \) also looks promising for White.

10  \( \text{Qg3} \)

Although the knight may not seem particularly well placed here, it is actually a key piece in many kingside attacks. Black can now choose to defend his b-pawn in two ways.

10...\( \text{c5} \)

The alternative is 10...a5 11  \( \text{Ah6} \) 0-0 (11...\( \text{Ahxh6} \) 12  \( \text{Qxh6} \) is the lesser evil, but makes life hard for the black king, who will not feel comfortable on the queenside) 12  \( \text{h4} \) with a looming kingside attack.

11  \( \text{dxc5} \)

11 c3 would lead to play along the lines of 9...\( \text{c5} \) 10 c3.

11...\( \text{Qxc5} \)?

This is far too ambitious. Probably 11...\( \text{Qg4} \) is best; e.g., 12  \( \text{Qd4} \)  \( \text{Qxd4} \) 13  \( \text{Qxd4} \)  \( \text{dxc5} \) and in Borgo-Spassky, Italy 1995 White should have gone for equality with 14 \( \text{\textit{Qf3 Qde5}} \) 15 \( \text{\textit{Qxe5}} \) \( \text{\textit{Qxe5}} \) 16 \( \text{\textit{Ad1.}} \)

Although very sensible and safe, this isn’t really necessary yet and I would recommend an immediate strike against the black queenside. The move that really fits the bill is 8 a4. This is the classic response to Black’s queenside pawn advance. White seeks to gain ground on the queenside to increase his manoeuvring space and has done rather well in practice following we have already considered under the

Sochi 1970

1 e4 g6 2 d4 \(\text{Qg7} 3 \text{c3} d6 4 \text{Qe3} c6 5 \text{Qd2} b5\)
This is a popular move, seeking to initiate immediate counterplay on the queenside. 5...\(\text{Wc7}\) and 5...\(\text{Wa5}\) are both very likely to transpose to positions we discussed after the move 5...\(\text{Qd7}\) in Game 21.

6 \(\text{Qd3} (D)\)

6...\(\text{a6}\)
Here Black has a wide choice:

a) 6...\(\text{Qd7} 7 \text{Qf3}\) would lead right back to Game 21.

b) 6...\(\text{Qf6} 7 \text{Qf3}\) leads to typical Pirc positions.

c) 6...\(\text{b4}\) must be considered inaccurate, given that White often expends a tempo with \(\text{a4}\) in order to get Black to do just this. After 7 \(\text{Qc2}\) there is:

\(c2\) 7...\(\text{Qb6} 8 \text{Qf3} \text{d5}\) (Black is mixing up systems in order to confuse White, but he is lagging behind with development) 9 \(\text{e5} \text{Wb7}\) 10 \(\text{c4}\) (the better developed side should normally try to open the position) 10...\(\text{dxc4}\) 11 \(\text{Qxc4} \text{e6} 12 \text{Qg5} \text{Qe7}\) 13 \(\text{Qe4}\) (Black’s odd opening play has left him with critically weak dark squares) 13...0-0 14 \(\text{Qh6}\) (when playing against a weak colour complex, it usually makes sense to exchange any pieces that can guard the crucial squares) 14...\(\text{Qd7}\) 15 \(\text{Qxg7} \text{Qxg7}\) 16 \(\text{h4} \text{c5}\) (faced with a massive kingside attack, Black is compelled to strike back) 17 \(\text{Qf4}\) 18 \(\text{exf6+}\) 19 \(\text{Qxc5} \text{Wxg2}\) 20 \(\text{Qg1} \text{Wc6}\) 21 \(\text{Qe5} \text{Qed5}\) 22 \(\text{Qg3}\) 23 \(\text{Qh5+}\) (placing Black on the critical list) 23...\(\text{Qg8}\) 24 \(\text{Qxf6+}\) 25 \(\text{Qxf6}\) and Black could easily have resigned in J.Schneider-Stassen, Wallertheim 1994.

3 Colle-Zukertort System

Introduction

The Colle-Zukertort System is a flexible alternative to offering the Queen’s Gambit. Through our recommended method of development, we take away many of Black’s exciting options, such as the Botvinnik Variation of the Semi-Slav. Hopefully, we again lure Black onto unfamiliar ground. When I used to play a lot of amateur league chess, the majority of club players who defended the Queen’s Gambit were fairly solid characters. They were happy to play slightly inferior positions for hours on end, waiting patiently for a mistake from their opponent (often caused by outright boredom). If this is true about your opponents, then they are in for a surprise!

On the surface, White’s opening appears quite unassuming. However, with just a couple of inaccuracies, Black is often left facing a frontal attack against his king. For a normally stodgy opponent, the message will be clear: kill or be killed! The question is, will Black find things too hot to handle? To begin, let’s take a look at a game where Zukertort, who generally played his opening in more positional fashion than I shall be advocating, unleashed his opening on an unsuspecting Englishman.

Game 23
Zukertort – Blackburne
London 1883

1 d4 d5 2 ♕f3 ♕f6 3 e3 e6 4 ♕d3 c5 5 b3

Please note that I have adjusted the move-order for the purpose of our discussion (the actual sequence was 1 d4 e6 2 ♕f3 ♕f6 3 e3 d5 4 ♕d3 ♕e7 5 0-0 0-0 6 b3 c5).

Johannes Zukertort was the inventor of this system for White. The idea is to make the dark-squared bishop a more dangerous piece than in the sister variation (the Colle) where White plays c3. The beauty of the Colle-Zukertort is that the theory is easy to remember. White can set up the same attacking formation against whatever defensive regime Black chooses.

5...♕e7

This passive development of the bishop may seem unduly cautious, but as we shall see, with the bishop on d6 White sometimes gets to release his dark-squared bishop with tempo, with devastating effect.

6 0-0 0-0 7 ♕b2 (D)

7...♕c6 8 ♕bd2 exd4 9 exd4 b6 10 c4

With this move, White begins an unusual plan of playing almost solely on the queenside and in the centre.
The resulting positions can also arise from move-orders with an earlier c4. More typical for the Zukertort is 10 \(\text{\textit{e5 b7} 11 \text{f4}}\) followed by swinging a major piece over to h3 and bringing it into the kingside attack. This idea will be discussed to a much fuller extent later on.

10...\text{\textit{a6}}

Black has also tried:

a) 10...\text{\textit{dxc4 11 bxc4 a6 12 c1 \textit{e8} 13 \textit{we2 b4 14 b1 bd5 15 e5} = Malaniuk-Gyimesi, Warsaw rapid 2005.}}

b) 10...\text{\textit{b4}} is another theme to which we shall return. Typically the losses of tempo cancel each other out: 11 \text{\textit{e2 b7 12 a3 c6 13 d3 dxc4 14 bxc4 w7 15 e1 wf4 16 we2 ad8 17 we3 xe3 18 fxe3 ed7 19 c3 1/2-1/2 Seirawan-Xu Jun, Seattle 2001.}}

11 \text{\textit{e1 ec8 12 c1 a5}}

Other options include:

a) 12...\text{\textit{b4 13 b1 dxc4 14 bxc4 b5 15 a3 c6 16 c5 b7 17 df1 a6 18 e3 a5 19 e5 e4 20 xe4 xe4 21 c2 f6 22 b4 + Benares-Jatoba, Rio de Janeiro, 2004.}}

b) 12...\text{\textit{b7 13 a3 dxc4 14 bxc4 e8 (14...\textit{a5 15 e5 d6 16 f4 c7 17 e3 = Saacke-Behrhorst, Bundesliga 1981/2) 15 df1 c7 16 d5 d7 17 we2 exd5 18 xf6 gxf6 19 f5 d6 20 h4 d5 21 wh5 g6 22 xg6 hgx6 23 xg6 fxg6 24 xg6+ f8 25 wh6+ f7 26 wh7+ f8 27 c3 f5 28 g3 g5 29 xg5 1-0 Kastani-edra-Zaw Win Lay, Istanbul Olympiad 2000.}}

13 \text{\textit{e5}}

White is getting ready for the c5 push.

In an earlier round in the same tournament, Zukertort tried 13 \text{\textit{we2}}. After 13...\text{\textit{b4 (13...\textit{d6 14 e5 c7 15 c5 xd3 16 xd3 e7 17 b4 b7 18 e5 a5 19 a3 gave White a clear advantage in Stumpf-J.Fischer, Germany tt 2000/1) 14 a3 d6 15 c5 xd3 16 xd3 fd4 17 c2 d6 18 b4 d8 19 b5 \textit{e7} 20 a4 he had an excellent position and went on to win in Zukertort-Englisch, London 1883.}}

13...\text{\textit{b4}}

13...\text{\textit{dxc4}} is another idea, giving White the dynamic ‘hanging pawns’ centre after 14 bxc4.

14 c5 (D)

With this advance, White creates a powerful queenside passed pawn. In the meantime, White’s pieces are ideally placed to stop Black making anything of his central pawn-majority.
Main Line: Black plays...
\[\ldots \text{c}6 \text{ and } \ldots \text{d}6\]

Game 24

White builds up slowly, which is very important even in the more attacking lines. Black's choice of active counterplay is limited, so White can afford to improve his position gradually.

19...\text{d}7 20 \text{ec}1 \text{bx}c5 21 \text{dx}c5 \text{b}8 22 \text{e}5 \text{f}6 23 \text{c}6
The c-pawn is a monster -- White already has a clear advantage.

23...\text{c}7
23...\text{fxe}5 24 \text{c}7 \text{wd}7 25 \text{cx}b8 \text{wb}8 26 \text{c}7 \text{w}a7 \text{w}b8 23...\text{d}4 is relatively the best try.

24 \text{wd}2 \text{fxe}5 25 \text{xa}5 \text{e}8 26 \text{xe}5 \text{f}7
26...\text{xc}6 27 \text{wa}7 \text{wb}8 27...\text{xc}6 28 \text{wc}8 29 \text{wa}7 \text{e}5 30 \text{c}5 \text{e}4 31 \text{b}5
To convert his advantage into victory, White needs to exchange major pieces.

31...\text{ef}8 32 \text{b}8 \text{wd}7 33 \text{xf}8+ \text{xf}8 34 \text{a}4 \text{xa}4 35 \text{bx}a4 \text{c}8 36 \text{fxe}4 \text{dx}e4 37 \text{f}2 \text{f}7 38 \text{e}3 \text{e}6 39 \text{xe}4 \text{g}6 40 \text{c}6+ \text{d}7 41 \text{d}5 1-0

This is the basic starting position for the Colle-Zukertort System. It would be reached through our repertoire move-order of 1 \text{d}4 \text{d}5 2 \text{d}f3 \text{f}6 3 \text{e}3 \text{e}6 4 \text{d}3 \text{c}5 5 \text{b}3. It is less frequently played than the Colle proper and this makes it less likely that your opponent will be ready for it. White aims to combine speedy development with kingside attacking chances.

5...\text{c}6

The systems where Black plays...
\[\ldots \text{e}7 \text{ or } \ldots \text{bd}7\] are covered later, so here I am only concerned with alternatives which do not easily transpose. The attempt to simplify by 5...\text{cxd}4 is possibly a mistake. By clarifying the central tension, Black makes it easier for White to access the key e5-square. 6 exd4 ©c6 7 0-0 ©d6 8 a3 (White often decides it is worth a tempo to avoid an annoying ...©b4 at some stage) 8...0-0 9 ©e1 h6?! Alternatively Black has tried 6...a6?! , hinting at queenside expansion, but by 7 ©b2! White sees that this will be to his advantage. Now:

a) 7...b5 is met by 8 a4 c4 (8...©b8 9 axb5 axb5 10 dxс5 ±) 9 axb5 exd3 10 bxc6 dxс2 11 ©xc2 ±.

b) 7...cxd4 8 exd4 (the net effect of White calling Black’s bluff is that he has gained a tempo on normal lines; as you would expect, this grants White the advantage with accurate play) 8...©d6 9 ©bd2 0-0 10 ©e1 ©d7 11 ©e5 ©c8 12 a3 (as this is a move White often has to play, it may be useful to introduce it much earlier in order not to worry about ...©b4 at any stage; as the position is relatively closed, a3 is not a significant loss of tempo) 12...©e7 13 ©f3 ©g6 14 g3 ©e8 15 ©g5 (White has built up a dream attacking position in the Colle-Zukertort) 15...©e7 16 b4 (16 ©xg6 hxg6 17 ©xg6 fxg6 18 ©xe6 is possible but passes the initiative to Black, which in the current position would be a crime) 16...©h8 17 a4 (White takes away any possibility of ...©b5, which hitherto would have been met by c4) 17...h6 18 ©h3 ©d7 19 ©f4 ©b4 20 c3 ©d6 (20...©xc3 loses to 21 ©c2) 21 ©c2 g6 22 ©d2 (this game is impressive, as White is remarkably restrained about his various sacrificial possibilities and instead systematically increases the pressure with each move) 22...g5 (Black can stand the tension no longer and lashes out; this move serves only to weaken further his already loose kingside) 23 ©h3 ©xe5 24 dxe5 ©e7 25 hxg5 hxg5 26 ©e2 ©g6 27 ©g4 (the upshot of Black’s 22nd move is that the g5-pawn is irrevocably weak and ultimately lost)

b) 7...\textit{w}c7 8 c4 (with the black queen committed to c7, this advance is even more attractive) and now:

b1) 8...\textit{xc}4 9 bxc4 \textit{b}6 (this is the idea behind ...\textit{xc}4, but two early queen moves just to harass a bishop can’t be right) 10 \textit{w}c1 \textit{b}4 11 \textit{e}2 \textit{d}7 12 \textit{xd}2 \textit{w}c7 13 \textit{dx}5 \textit{e}7 (13...\textit{xc}5 14 \textit{xf}6 \textit{gx}f6 15 \textit{e}4 \textit{e}7 16 \textit{b}2 \textit{b}3 \textit{c}6 15 \textit{c}3 0-0 16 \textit{w}b2 \textit{fd}8 17 \textit{ab}1 \textit{e}8 18 \textit{fd}4 a5 19 \textit{b}5 \textit{b}8 20 a4 \textit{f}7 Dizdar-Sax, Vinkovci 1993.

b2) The other capture is also interesting: 8...\textit{xc}d4 9 \textit{ex}d4 0-0 (Black tries a less ambitious approach, restricting himself to one pawn exchange, so as to reduce White’s dynamic potential) 10 \textit{bd}2 b6 11 \textit{hc}1 \textit{h}7 12 \textit{e}2 \textit{fd}8 13 \textit{e}5 \textit{xe}5 (if Black wants to take on e5, this would normally be a good time to do it, as White would otherwise play f4 and be able to recapture with the f-pawn; however, now the slightly awkward placing of the black queen becomes a factor) 14 dx\textit{e}5 \textit{d}7 15 cxd5 \textit{ex}d5 16 b4 a6 17 e6 fx\textit{e}6 18 \textit{we}6+ \textit{h}8 19 \textit{f}7 (Black is bound

The traditional main line. Alternatives are discussed in the next game. 8...cxd4

8...♕e7 is featured in Game 25 but Black has a number of other moves:

a) 8...♕b4 (this is intended to harass White’s important bishop on d3, but as we shall see, Black gains no time by doing so) 9 ♛e2 b6 10 a3 ♛c6 11 ♛e5 ♛e7 12 ♛d3 ♛b7 13 ♛f3 ♛g6 14 ♛h3 (I must admit to being a fan of this queen manoeuvre, which puts pressure on h7 and e6 simultaneously) 14...cxd4?! 15 ♛xg6! hxg6 16 exd4 ♛c8 17 ♛f1 ♛c7 18 ♛f3 ♛e4 (this is one of Black’s most solid defensive tries, aiming to blunt the power of White’s light-squared bishop; the game now becomes more positional, as outright attacking lines for White don’t seem to work) 19 ♛e5 (19 ♛c1?? ♛e7) 19...♕xe5 20 dxe5 ♛c5 21 ♛d4 (a clever idea as after 21...cxd3 22 ♛xd3 ♛c8 23 c3 it would be difficult for Black to get any serious counterplay without sacrificing material) 21...♖d7 22 b4 ♛e4?!
(22...\texttt{Q}xd3 could be a better try now that Black can make some inroads on the light squares) 23 \texttt{N}e3 \texttt{R}fc8 24 \texttt{N}ae1 \texttt{N}c6 25 \texttt{R}g4 \texttt{b}5 26 \texttt{R}xe4 dxe4 27 c3 \texttt{N}c6 28 h4 (with the c-file firmly covered, White has a free hand to attack) 28...\texttt{R}e8 29 \texttt{R}f4 \texttt{d}5 30 \texttt{R}g3 \texttt{N}h7 31 \texttt{N}ee3 \texttt{wa}4 (Black makes a break for freedom with his queen, but his king begins to feel the heat) 32 \texttt{R}g4 \texttt{h}8 33 \texttt{h}5 \texttt{g}8 34 hxg6 fxg6 35 \texttt{h}h3 \texttt{x}h3 36 \texttt{x}h3 e3 (36...\texttt{N}f7 37 \texttt{h}h8) 37 \texttt{R}xg6 \texttt{exf}2+ (37...\texttt{e}2 38 \texttt{h}7+ \texttt{f}7 39 \texttt{h}h5+ \texttt{c}7 40 \texttt{x}e2 \pm) 38 \texttt{N}xh2 \texttt{N}e7 40 c4 \texttt{N}c6 41 \texttt{b}5 \texttt{w}e2 42 \texttt{b}xc6 1-0 Rubinstein-Bogoljubow, Stockholm/Gothenburg 1920.

b) 8...\texttt{N}e8 (like 8...\texttt{w}e7, this is an attempt to achieve the freeing ...e5 advance, but it is easy for White to thwart this) 9 \texttt{e}5 \texttt{w}e7 10 \texttt{f}4 \texttt{cxd}4 11 \texttt{exd}4 \texttt{b}4 (White needs to be wary of the combination of ...\texttt{w}f7 and ...\texttt{b}4 and I would advise the reader to prepare to meet ...\texttt{w}f7 with either c4 or a3; in this particular position White is OK because he can attack the rook on e8 – but be careful!) 12 \texttt{N}d5 \texttt{e}7? (12...\texttt{d}7 keeps Black’s position more harmonious) 13 c3 \texttt{d}c6 14 \texttt{R}f3 \texttt{d}d7 15 \texttt{N}d3 \texttt{e}8 16 \texttt{h}h3 g6 17 \texttt{N}h4 \texttt{d}d7 (Black seems to have defended himself with great care, but in reality his pieces are in a bit of a tangle, mostly due to the rook on e7; White is quick to exploit this) 18 c4 (White opens up a second front on the queenside) 18...\texttt{N}f8? (Black collapses under the increasing pressure; 18...\texttt{d}xe5 19 fxe5 \texttt{N}b4 20 \texttt{f}3 \texttt{d}7 saves the piece but is highly unpleasant for Black) 19 \texttt{N}xc6 \texttt{w}xc6 20 c5 \texttt{N}xc5 21 \texttt{N}ac1 \texttt{d}7 22 dxc5 1-0 Euwe-Kroone, Amsterdam 1921.

Black has also tried:

a) After 9...\texttt{w}c7, 10 a3 transposes to note ‘c’ to Black’s 7th move, while 10 c4 is line ‘b2’ of that same note.

b) 9...\texttt{b}4 tends to cost both sides the same amount of temp: 10 \texttt{e}2 \texttt{d}7 (10...\texttt{e}4!? is an interesting try, since 11 a3 \texttt{c}6 12 \texttt{d}d3 (12 \texttt{d}xe4 \texttt{d}xe4 13 \texttt{d}d2 f5 14 \texttt{e}1 \texttt{c}7 15 \texttt{f}1 \texttt{g}5 \mp Tarlev-Grekh, Lvov 2004) 12...f5 13 \texttt{w}e2 \texttt{f}6 14 b4 \texttt{w}h6 15 \texttt{f}d1 \texttt{d}7 16 \texttt{f}1 g5 17 \texttt{e}5 gave White little in A.Hoffman-L.Bronstein, Buenos Aires 1990) 11 a3 \texttt{c}6 12 \texttt{d}d3 (back to square one!) 12...\texttt{c}7 13 \texttt{w}e2 \texttt{e}7 14 \texttt{e}5 \texttt{f}5 15 g4 (this is a key idea for White in the Colle-Zukertort – the g-pawn advances to drive back Black’s kingside defenders; this leaves some weaknesses on the white kingside but White counts on his initiative to see him through) 15...\texttt{e}7 16 g5 \texttt{e}8 (the g4-g5 pawn-thrust is especially effective if Black’s bishop is on d7 rather than b7; on d7 the bishop takes away a retreat-square from the f6-knight and there is less danger of an accident on the h1-a8 diagonal) 17 f4 \( \text{xf}5 \) 18 \( \text{xf}3 \) f6 19 gxf6 \( \text{xf}6 \)?! (Black should try 19...gxf6, since after the text-move, 20 \( \text{x}d7 \) \( \text{xd}7 \) 21 \( \text{x}g5 \) gives Black a major problem on e6) 20 \( \text{x}g5 \)?! \( \text{c}8 \) 21 eae1 h6 22 \( \text{h}3 \) (the knight finds a route to g4) 22...a6 23 \( \text{wh}1 \) b6 24 g1 \( \text{b}7 \) 25 g2 \( \text{h}4 \) 26 g1 \( \text{xf}5 \) 27 \( \text{xf}2 \) eae8 28 \( \text{fg}4 \) \( \text{xe}4 \) 29 \( \text{wg}4 \) \( \text{xe}5 \) 30 fxe5 \( \text{h}8 \) 31 \( \text{ef}1 \) \( \text{wd}7 \) (Black is defending himself quite well, but as usual finds it hard to develop counterplay) 32 \( \text{f}3 \) \( \text{f}7 \) 33 \( \text{ wg}6 \) \( \text{ef}8 \)? 34 \( \text{c}1 \)! \( \text{e}7 \) 35 \( \text{h}3 \) (White has completed the mobilization of his forces and Black is helpless against the various breakthrough ideas) 35...a5 (Walmisley-Samworth, Connecticut 1994) and now the clearest win is 36 \( \text{x}f5 \) exf5 (36...\( \text{x}f5 \) 37 \( \text{hx}6 \)!) 37 \( \text{g}5 \)! and 38 \( \text{hx}6 \)+.

10 a3 \( \text{b}7 \) (D)

Two other games are worth mentioning as they illustrate some very useful and characteristic Colle-Zukertort ideas.

First a golden oldie: 11 \( \text{we}2 \) (if you like the idea of putting your rook on h3 then this is the move for you) 11...\( \text{c}8 \) 12 \( \text{e}5 \) \( \text{we}7 \) 13 f4 \( \text{e}8 \) 14 \( \text{f}3 \) \( \text{f}8 \) 15 \( \text{h}3 \) \( g6 \) 16 g4 \( \text{g}7 \) 17 \( \text{f}1 \) \( \text{e}7 \) 18 \( \text{f}2 \) (the main thing is for White not to rush the attack but to build up slowly; it is often harder to defend against vague threats than concrete ones you can calculate) 18...\( \text{h}8 \) 19 \( \text{g}2 \) \( \text{c}7 \) 20 \( \text{df}3 \) \( \text{eg}8 \)? 21 \( \text{g}5 \) \( \text{h}6 \) (21...\( \text{ec}8 \) 22 \( \text{gx}f7 \) + \( \text{xf}7 \) 23 \( \text{gx}g6 \) + --) 22 \( \text{gxf7} \) + \( \text{xf7} \) 23 \( \text{gx}g6 \) + \( \text{h}7 \) 24 \( \text{f}8 \) + \( \text{h}8 \) 25 \( \text{g}6 \) + \( \text{h}7 \) 26 \( \text{e}5 \) + \( \text{h}8 \) 27 g5 (after toying with his opponent, White goes for the jugular) 27...\( \text{xe}5 \) 28 gxf6 \( \text{xf}6 \) 29 \( \text{g}7 \) \( \text{g}7 \) + 30 \( \text{g}3 \) \( \text{c}8 \) 31 c4 \( \text{d}7 \) 32 \( \text{h}5 \) \( \text{d}7 \) 33 \( \text{xh}6 \) + 1-0 Maroczy-Blake, Hastings 1923.

And next, the greatest Colle-Zukertort triumph in recent times (admittedly it's only a rapid game, but when the opponent is Anand it hardly detracts from the feat): 11 \( \text{e}5 \) \( \text{c}7 \) 12 \( \text{we}2 \) \( \text{e}7 \) 13 f4 b5?! As we saw in the previous note, if White can establish knights on g5 and e5 then Black is in serious trouble. The text-move is an attempt to hinder this, but it is ultimately unsuccessful. Other examples of play are:

White continues to develop naturally. However, as a response to White’s difficulties demonstrating an advantage in the main line, there has been quite a lot of experimentation from this position. These variations contain plenty of useful motifs of the Colle-Zukertort, so we should examine them carefully:

a) 8 dxc5 \textit{dx}c5 9 a3!??, planning b4 and c4, was suggested by David Rudel as a way to play a kind of reversed Meran Semi-Slav. This leads to unbalanced positions where White may fight for an advantage – in particular if he has a good understanding of Meran positions. Yet it seems overly optimistic to claim that the extra tempo is sufficient for an objective advantage.

c) 8 c4 (this makes slightly less sense when the black queen isn’t on the c-file, but White has an original plan in mind) 8...b6 9 c3 (this development of the queen’s knight is more familiar to the Classical Queen’s Indian) 9...cxd4 10 exd4 c4 11 bxc4 e5 (Black shows he is equal to the task and reduces White’s dynamic potential at the expense of allowing a protected passed pawn) 12 d5 a5 13 e1 g4 14 h3 xf3 15 xf3 c8 16 db5 (this is one possibility normally denied to White, and indeed the knight proves to be a real workhorse) 16...b8 17 d6 a6 18 c7 e4 19 xe4! wd6 (19...xe4 20 xe4 ±) 20 d5 c6 21 xf6 xf6 22 xf6 xf6 23 d5 (from meagre beginnings, the knight is now master of all he surveys) 23...f5 24 h4 e5 25 b1 c8 26 bx6 and White realized his material advantage in Ryan-Engqvist, Isle of Man 1995.

d) 8 c5 (this early deployment of the knight is unusual, but involves a particularly nasty trap) 8...c7 9 f4 and now:

  \item d) 12...\text{d}6 13 \text{f}4 (this is the basic idea: White sets up a Stonewall formation without the drawback of a dark-squared bishop) 13...\text{d}7 14 \text{f}3 \text{e}7 15 \text{h}3 (as I have mentioned, this is one of my favourite manoeuvres) 15...\text{g}6 16 \text{f}3 \text{c}6 17 \text{e}1 \text{fe}8 18 \text{g}4 (I decided this pawn-push was worth the risk, since I could remove Black’s light-squared bishop at will) 18...\text{ac}8 19 \text{g}5 \text{e}4 (19...\text{d}7 20 \text{h}5 leaves White with a massive attack, so Black is more or less forced to part with a pawn in order to relieve the tension) 20 \text{xe}4 \text{dxe}4 21 \text{xe}4 \text{xe}4 22 \text{xe}4 \text{wa}3 23 \text{xe}6 \text{hx}6 24 \text{e}2 \text{ed}8 25 \text{w}f1 = Summerscale-I.Thompson, Hastings 1994/5.

  \item e) 12...\text{d}7 13 \text{f}4 and now:
  \begin{itemize}
    \item e1) 13...\text{f}8 does not make a great deal of difference, viz. 14 \text{g}4 (again White chooses this attacking lunge to gain space on the kingside and drive back the f6-knight) 14...\text{e}8 15 \text{g}5 \text{d}7 16 \text{f}3 (Black now has to content with possible bishop sacrifices on h7) 16...\text{xe}5 17 \text{f}xe5 \text{g}6 18 \text{c}1 (in this variation White is much more concerned with keeping his central supporting c-pawn than his a-pawn) 18...\texttt{wa}5 19 \texttt{eb}1 b5 20 \texttt{ef}1 (the knight is \textit{en route} to g4, enticing Black to strike back on the queenside) 20...b4 21 c4 dxc4 22 bxc4 (White now enjoys a clear advantage, with a mobile central pawn-majority, and clear weaknesses to exploit, in the form of Black's weak dark squares on the kingside and a target on f7) 22...\texttt{ad}8 23 \texttt{we}1 \texttt{df}8 24 \texttt{ff}2 (with his centre stable, White can start to think about establishing a knight on f6 or h6, trebling on the f-file and loosening Black further with h4-h5) 24...\texttt{ac}6 (faced with an extremely difficult defence, Black self-destructs) 25 \texttt{xf}7 \texttt{xd}4 26 \texttt{f}6 \texttt{g}4+ 27 \texttt{gg}3 1-0 Danner-Beim, Vienna 1996.

e2) 13...\texttt{ac}8 14 \texttt{f}3 g6 15 \texttt{we}1 \texttt{g}7 16 \texttt{h}3 \texttt{e}8 17 \texttt{df}3 \texttt{h}8 18 \texttt{d}2 \texttt{e}7 19 g4 (after a slower build-up, White again pushes his g-pawn towards the goal) 19...\texttt{a}5 20 \texttt{c}1 \texttt{b}5 21 \texttt{b}1 h5 (having defended well so far, Black falters and weakens his kingside) 22 \texttt{g}5 \texttt{cf}8 23 f5 (the upshot is that g6 is now critically weak) 23...\texttt{a}6 24 \texttt{e}1 \texttt{xf}5 25 \texttt{x}f5 \texttt{d}6 26 \texttt{ee}3 (26 \texttt{fxg}6 wins most cleanly) 26...\texttt{fg}8 27 \texttt{fxg}6 \texttt{f}6 1-0 Høi-Danielsen, Danish Ch, Ringsted 1995. It may seem odd to resign when you are threatening mate in one but after 28 \texttt{ef}3 Black is totally lost.

13 \texttt{ac}1

This would also be the response to 12...\texttt{b}2.

13...\texttt{d}7 (D)

We have already seen that White can quietly build up a huge attack through natural moves and that the a-pawn is fairly irrelevant in the general scheme of things.

Now White can choose between kicking back the black knight with normal play, or ignoring it, arguing that the knight has no real future on b4. The first choice is the usual answer but as Yusupov shows in the next note, creative play has its own rewards.

A related idea is 5...cxd4 6 exd4 b4+ 7 c3 d6, when Palliser suggests 8 0-0 0-0 9 e2 c7 10 c4!?. Other rare 5th moves are examined in our next game.

22 g4
The attempt to disrupt White’s development with this queen check is a double-edged plan. White is more or less forced to play c3, which will restrict the mobility of his dark-squared bishop. On the other hand, the black queen is misplaced on a5 and if she returns to a more natural square, such as c7, then c4 will, as usual, become a major option for White.

7 \(\text{#xd4}\)

White now has an edge.

7...\(\text{#c6}\) 8 0-0 \(\text{#e7}\)

13 \(\text{#e2}\) \(\text{#f8}\) 14 \(\text{#e3}\)?

In his notes Yusupov claims a clear plus for White after 14 \(\text{#b2}\) \(\text{#c7}\) 15 \(\text{#d2}\) (15 c4!!?) 15...\(b6\) 16 c4 dxc4 17 \(\text{#xc4}\). I see no reason to disagree with Yusupov’s assessment, with the idea of \(\text{#d6}\) looming.

14...\(\text{#xe5}\) 15 \(\text{#d4}\) \(\text{#xd3}\) 16 \(\text{#xd3}\)

Now, however, White has enough compensation for the pawn but no more than that.

16...\(\text{#g8}\) 17 \(\text{#d2}\) \(\text{#d7}\) (D)

After 17...\(\text{#f6}\)!, Yusupov gave 18 c4 as unclear, but perhaps White should stop ...\(e5\) by 18 \(\text{#f4}\).

18 \(\text{#e3}\)

This attacks the e5-square but makes the bishop vulnerable to dxc5 in certain lines.

Other rare moves include:

a) 5...\textbf{b6} to some extent threatens \textbf{a6}, exchanging light-squared bishops. In Mah-Speelman, British League (4NCL) 2007/8 White prevented this with 6 \textbf{we2} \textbf{e7} 7 0-0 0-0 8 \textbf{bd2} \textbf{c6} 9 \textbf{a3} \textbf{b7} 10 \textbf{b2} \textbf{wc7} 11 \textbf{ac1} \textbf{fd8} 12 \textbf{ce5} \textbf{xe5} 13 dxe5 \textbf{e4} =.

Johansson-Rantanen, Helsinki 2002.

8 0-0 \( \text{Wc7} \)

I feel the knight is misplaced on d7; if Black continues normally with 8...b6 or 8...\( \text{Wc7} \) then he will undoubtedly get an inferior version of the main line after 9 \( \text{Qxe5} \), as taking on e5 becomes less attractive since the f6-knight lacks a decent retreat-square. These disadvantages outweigh the fact that the knight on f6 is given some extra support in some lines. Therefore Black covers e5 directly with his queen, but this leaves it vulnerable on the c-file.

9 \( \text{c4} \) (D)

With \( \text{Qxe5} \) now prevented, he could consider 9...b6, but the c-file will surely become a problem. More immediate tactics on this file occur after 9...\( \text{cxd4} \) 10 \( \text{exd4} \) \( \text{xc4} \) (10...b6 11 \( \text{Ec1} \) \( \text{Wb8} \) 12 \( \text{Wc2} \) \( \text{b7} \) 13 \( \text{Qxe5} \) g6 14 f4 \( \text{Qe8} \) 15 \( \text{Qc2} \) \( \text{Wd8} \) 16 \( \text{Qfc1} \) \( \pm \) Szmacinska-Sofieva, Warsaw 1988) 11 \( \text{Qxc4}! \) \( \text{Qe7} \) 12 \( \text{Ec1} \) \( \text{Wd8} \) 13 \( \text{Wc2} \) and White is much better, V. 11 \( \text{dxe5} \) \( \text{Qxe5} \) 12 \( \text{Qxe5} \) \( \text{Qxe5} \) 13 \( \text{Qh7+} \)

This simple combination nets White a clear pawn and effectively wins the game.

It seems as though White is just building up pressure on the c5-pawn, but in reality he is preparing a thunderbolt.

17...b6? 18 \( \text{Qg7!} \)

A brave decision, since White is completely winning without any need for fireworks, but this sacrifice is highly thematic and a classic example of the dangers Black must always watch out for.

World Ch match (game 2), Havana 1889

f3 (D)

I like this move, which shows good imagination. The obvious threat is \[ \text{b5} + \], winning a pawn. What is not so obvious is the positional threat of 5

\[ \text{h3} \], when after 5...

\[ \text{g6} 6 \text{xf6} \]

Black would be forced to capture anti-positionally with the f-pawn.

4...

The only way to meet both threats.

5 c4

This is nearly always the way to take advantage of the early development of Black’s queen’s bishop.

5...

\[ \text{f6} 6 \text{f3} \]

with natural moves, as in the main game.

4 g4 is also very strong.
In Solozhenkin–Rodkin, St Petersburg 2004, White preferred the sharper 6 g4!? fxg5 7 gxh5 e4?! (7...dxec4 is a better try) 8 wb3 c6 9 ad3 wc7 10 cxd5 cxd5 11 ec3 ++.

6...e6 7 dc3 ag6 8 wd1 c6 9 e3

A peculiar kind of Semi-Slav structure has arisen, however, it is significantly worse for Black than usual: Black’s queen is misplaced on c8 and his pawn-structure has been weakened by ...f6, which hinders the natural development of the g8-knight.

9...ad6 10 ad2 ae7 11 ac1

Creating a concealed attack against the black queen and highlighting her awkward position.

11...ad7 12 ah4 (D)

Allowing his centre to collapse. Black had to play 15...0-0, when White is only slightly better.

16 ag6+ ag6 17 ae4 dxec4 18 ae4 ac7 19 hxg4

White has a large advantage.

Here Black could have already resigned.

30 ac8+ af7 31 ac7+ af6 32 af5+

Game 32

Krallmann – Drill
Kassel 1994

1 d4 d5 2 ef3 ef5

Black develops the bishop outside his intended pawn-chain, but to a square where it is less exposed than it is on g4. In a sense, this is a logical attempt to take advantage of the slowness of 2 ef3, since White has fewer active options than he does in the case of 1 d4 d5 2 c4 ef5.

3 c4 e6 4 wB3 (D)

This is the most natural way to take advantage of Black’s early bishop sortie. The b7-square is no longer defended, so White immediately goes about attacking it and the queenside light squares in general.

4...ac6
This is the most active move, by which White is prevented from taking on b7 due to ...\( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)b4. The main alternative here is 4...\( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c8 but after 5 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c3 White has the idea of quick development and attack on the queenside, i.e. \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)f4, \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c1, cxd5 and an eventual b4-b5, while 4...b6 is exactly the sort of light-squared weakness White is trying to provoke.

5 c5

This excellent response renews the threat of taking on b7 and shuts out Black’s king’s bishop.

5...\( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)b8

5...a5?! has received surprisingly little attention. After 6 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)f4 (6 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)xb7?? \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)b4 7 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)a3 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)b8 8 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)a7 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)a8 is a draw by repetition) 6...\( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)b4 7 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)a3, 7...\( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)e7?, as played in Conquest-B.Jörnsson, Hafnarfjörður 1992, allows 8 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)b5! \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c2+ 9 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)xc2! \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)xc2 10 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)xc7! \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)d7 11 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)d6+, when White wins a pawn.

6 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)f4

Another good move. White has a long-term plan of advancing on the queenside, which will give him a clear plus. Meanwhile he completes his development, while restricting Black’s possibilities. Black has two ways to break against White’s pawns. The first, ...b6, is ill-advised since it critically weakens the black knight on c6 after \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)a4. The second, more realistic, option is to play for ...e5. Thus White intensifies his grip on this square.

6...\( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)f6?!

This normal-looking move probably doesn’t meet the requirements of the position. Several of the world’s most creative players have worked on the task but have not succeeded in fully rehabilitating Black’s system. Some important tries:

a) 6...\( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)ge7 7 e3 a6 8 a3 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)g6 9 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)g3 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)e7 10 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)e2 0-0 11 0-0 e5?! 12 dxe5 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)xc5 13 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c3 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)e6 14 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)ad1 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)ce7 15 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c2 ± Polugaevsky-Vaganian, Moscow tt 1981.

b) 6...f6 7 e3 g5 (7...\( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)ge7 8 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c3 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)f7 9 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)a4 b6 10 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)b5 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)b7 11 cxb6 axb6 12 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c1 e5 13 dxe5 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)d7 14 exf6 gxf6 15 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)b3 ± Edvardsson-Westeringren, Hafnarfjörður 1999) 8 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)g3 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)ge7 9 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)a4 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)g7 10 b4 a6 11 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c3 0-0 12 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)e2 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)g6 and in Bareev-Speelman, Hastings 1992/3 White’s queenside initiative proved easier to pursue than Black’s kingside counterplay.

c) In Portisch-Larsen, Montreal 1979 Black actually made 6...h6 look quite viable: 7 e3 g5 8 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)g3 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)g7 9 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)c3 a6 10 h4 g4 11 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)e5 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)ge7 12 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)xc6 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)xc6 13 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)e2 0-0 14 \( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)d1 e5 and Black was probably OK. However, there are not many players around able to handle this kind of position (actually, not even Larsen was!).

We now return to 6...\( \text{\texttt{\textdollar}} \)f6?!. (D)
Black takes away the b5-square from White's knight.
8 e3
In Scalcione-Chatalbashev, Reggio Emilia 2002 Black still managed to generate kingside counterplay with the inventive 8...d7! 9 c1 e7 10 w4 g5 11 g3 h5 12 h3 f8 13 b4 g7 14 b3 g4.
9 e2 e4
9...d7, preparing to launch a kingside pawn-storm, might still be a better way to continue.
10 xex4 xex4 11 w4 0-0 12 0-0
Played to put pressure on d5 in the event that Black manages to play ...e5.
13 a8 14 b4
White has a space advantage on the queenside and clearly should attack there.
14 w7 15 ac1 fd8
15 e5 16 dxe5 ex5 17 xex5 xex5 18 xe5 we5 19 c6 b5 20 bh3 gives White the long-term plan of attacking the weak pawn on d5.
16 bh3 a7 17 a4
Black is being very prophylactic in his aim to discourage White's natural plan of b5. However, if White delays this, the two rooks look strange doubled up on a file that can only open if White chooses to play b5.
18 d2
The game now enters a phase of positional manoeuvring, where both sides try to achieve their strategic goals without allowing the opponent to achieve his; it's a clear case of cat and mouse.
18 h6 19 h3 h8 20 a2 d8 21 ca1
White plays the same game and, because he has more space, can even think about trebling on the a-file.
21 xf3 22 xf3 c6 23 wc3
The queen keeps a firm eye on the critical e5-square.
23 wd7 24 we2 e7 25 a3 f6
Black again hints at playing ...e5 one day but critically weakens the light squares on his kingside.
26 h5 f8 27 g6
With the bishop on g6, the b5 thrust becomes a more realistic possibility as the opening of lines will highlight the weakness of Black’s back rank.

27...a5
Therefore Black strikes out.
28 b5 cxb5 29 axb5 \textwxb5 30 \textd3
Now the bishop is forced to retreat but Black has a clear weakness on b7.

At last!
34 dxe5 fxe5
Black sets the trap 35 \textxe5? \textc6, winning a piece.
35 \textg3 \texte6

Through the thematic ...e5, Black has created a weakness on c5 at the cost of opening the position advantageously for the white bishops.
36 \textb5 \textc8 37 \textxe5 \textxc5 38 \texta4

White has a clear advantage as in this type of position, bishops rule!
38...\textc7 39 \textd3 \textd6 40 \textb2

Black’s back-rank problems come back to haunt him.

There’s not much to be done about the threat of \textxh6+.

Game 33
Burmakin – Meszaros
Szeged 1993

1 d4 d5 2 \textf3 c5
Black immediately strikes at the white centre; this is a very challenging move since Black attempts to play a Queen’s Gambit with colours reversed.
3 dxc5 \textd)

Taking up the challenge.
3...e6
3...\texta5+ and 3...\textf6 are likely to transpose to Game 36, though in the latter case, White could consider 4 a3 – compare Queen’s Gambit Accepted (QGA) lines.
4 c4 \textxc5

Having allowed Black’s bishop to reach c5 in one move, White must be careful to avoid simply ending up in a theoretical line where Black is a useful tempo up.
4...dxc4 5 ♕xd8+ ♗xd8 6 e4 leads to a small endgame advantage for White.

5 cxd5

Playing by strict analogy with the QGA might suggest 5 e3 and a3, but in this reversed form, Black can be happier with simplifying lines than White is with the dxc5 lines in the regular QGA.

5...exd5

5...♕f6 is playable as 6 dxe6?? loses to 6...♖xf2+. As 6 ♗c3 exd5 7 e3 would lead to a continuation that White avoids in the game, we suggest 6 ♕c2!?, with these options:

a) 6...♕c7 7 ♗c3 ♗xd5 8 ♘d2 ♗xc3 9 ♘xc3 0-0 10 e3 ♕b4 11 ♗c1 ♘xc3+ 12 ♕xc3 ♕xc3+ 13 ♕xc3 ♗c6 14 ♘b5 ♘d7 15 0-0 ♕f6 Summer-Matter-Flear, San Bernardino 1990.

b) 6...♗b6 7 e3 exd5 (7...♕xd5 8 a3 a5 9 e4 ♕f6 10 ♗c3 ♘d7 11 e5 ♕f6 Borges Mateos-Gonzalez Aguirre, Mislata 2001) 8 a3 0-0 9 b4 ♕e7 10 ♘b2 ♗g4 11 ♘bd2 ♘bd7 12 ♗d4 ♕d6 13 ♘d3 = Kurajica-Brkić, Solin 2007.

6 e3 ♙f6 7 a3!?

This interesting attempt to get away from the trodden path is still lightly tested. The position after the more common 7 ♗c3 0-0 8 ♕e2 ♗c6 9 0-0 a6 has proven satisfactory for Black, although strong players still take the white pieces hoping to reach an advantageous endgame.

7...a5 8 b3 leads to similar play but with White having control of b5. After 8...0-0 9 ♘b2 ♗c6 10 ♕e2 ♕e7 11 ♗c3 ♗g4 12 ♘b5 ♗e4 13 ♗fd4 ♕xd4 14 ♘xd4 chances were roughly equal in Duriga-Harasta, Slovakian Team Ch 2000/1 but with Black’s isolated queen’s pawn (IQP) safely blockaded, White had every possibility to play for a win in the endgame.

8 b4 ♗d6 9 ♗b2 ♕e8

9...a6 10 ♕e2 ♗c6 11 0-0 ♘c7 12 ♘bd2 essentially leads to the same kind of position: Black has the more active pieces but White can play for an endgame advantage. In Epszol-Peter, Hungarian Team Ch 1996/7 White had somewhat the better chances after 12...♕e7 13 ♕b3 ♘d8 14 ♕f1 ♘g4 15 ♘ad1 ♘b6 16 ♘f3 ♘ac8 17 ♘a2 ♘d6 18 ♘a1 ♘e8 19 ♘g3 ♘dd8 20 h3.

12...♗c7 13 ♕b3 ♘d6 14 ♘fd1 ♘g4 15 ♕f1

An unusual square for the knight in such positions. Normally you would want it on d4, but on f1 it is useful defensively as it guards both h2 and e3.

This tactical oversight comes close to losing the game on the spot.
21 \=e5 \=xe5 22 \=xe5 \=xf2 23 \=xg4

Game 34
Jobava – Zaragatski
Bad Zwischen 2005

1 d4 d5 2 \=f3 \=c6
Black indicates his willingness to play a Chigorin Defence.
3 \=f4 (D)

This move certainly has its logic. In the Chigorin Queen’s Gambit (1 d4 d5 2 c4 \=c6), Black seeks counterplay against the d4-pawn and often has the ...e5 thrust in mind. By avoiding the move c4 for the time being (though probably not for long!), White avoids any rapid counterplay against d4, and nailing down control of the e5-square also challenges Black to justify the move ...\=c6. If nothing special happens, the knight could end up demonstrating the classic reason why this move tended to be frowned upon: the c-pawn cannot be used in the fight for the centre.
3...\texttt{g}4

This seems logical. That is not to say that it will be easy to get a large advantage against other sensible moves:

This loses more or less by force but there is no really acceptable solution:

a) 12...xf3 13 wxb4 a5 14 wh4 g6 15 xg6 fxg6 16 b4 should be winning for White.

b) 12...xc3+ 13 xc3 a5 14 xf6 gxf6 15 d6 is extremely difficult for Black. A couple of sample variations illustrate his difficulties: 15...b6 16 xh7+ xh7 17 wh4 ±; 15...g6 16 h4 b5 17 wb4 wb6 18 g4 c5 19 xg6 fxg6 20 xg6 hxg6 21 xg6+ wh8 22 e4 with mate to follow.

Black’s Alternatives on Moves 3 and 4

Game 35

Vitor – Fancsy
Matinhos 1994

1 d4 d5 2 f3 xf6 3 e3 c5 4 dxc5 e6

Black tries to be solid.

Black has two alternatives, against which White has interesting ways to pose unusual problems:

a) 4...a5+ – Game 36.

b) 4...c6 (more aggressive – Black prepares ...e5; however, this move allows White to borrow ideas from another unusual defence) 5 c3 e6 (5...a5 6 b5 e6 7 b4 transposes; or 5...e5 leads to similar positions to that of 5...e6 but with the e-pawn more vulnerable) 6 b4 a5 7 b5 d7 8 b2 axb4 9 xxc6 xc6 10 cxb4 b6 11 a4 bxc5 12 b5 (D).

This position is a reversed Noteboom/Abrahams. White’s extra tempo again means he has a good chance of an advantage. The strategic factors are very similar to those discussed in our
5...a5 6 c3

The idea for this variation came from one of Black’s more ambitious defences to the Queen’s Gambit: after 1 d4 d5 2 c4 c6 3 f3 dxc4 4 e3 b5 5 a4 e6 we get a similar position with colours reversed. I believe the extra tempo gives White good chances for the advantage and certainly will throw Black upon his own resources.

6...axb4

6...b6 may be a more challenging test:

a) 7 a4 bxc5 8 b5 a6 9 c4 0-0 10 b2 b7 b6 11 b2 a5 12 c3 e7 13 c2 e8 14 e4 d4 = Summerscale-Plaskett, Edinburgh 1999.

b) 7 b5+ d7 8 xd7+ xd7 9 e4?! dxe4 10 g5 (White’s approach here is certainly bold, but also a little reckless; now 10...axb4 would have left White material down for compensation that is none too clear) 10...bxc5? and in An.Rodriguez-Panno, Villa Martelli 2008, rather than 11 0-0?!, White should have tried 11 b5; e.g., 11...c7 (11...c4 12 d4) 12 xe4 with an unbalanced position where White probably is a bit better.

7 exb4 b6 8 b5+ d7

Obviously not 8...b7? 9 c6 and White is winning.

9 xd7+ bxd7 10 a4 bxc5 11 b5

This is White’s key idea: he hopes to create two queenside passed pawns.
favour White, as his outside passed pawns gain power the closer an endgame approaches. Of course, if Black is generous enough to allow the pawns to advance free of charge, then you should be his guest!

Another important try is 11...c4 12 0-0 ²c5 with double-edged play; e.g., hard to evaluate but possibly slightly better for White, F.Christenson-Yakovich, Bergen 2002.

14 0-0 e5 15 e4

It is essential to prevent Black from achieving ...e4, even at the cost of a pawn.

After 15.d4, Black's pawns are more easily blockaded and therefore much less of a menace.

3...造血bd7 4 造血d3 c5 5 造血b3 造血f7 6 造血b2 puts paid to any ideas of an early ...造血e5.

4 造血b3

The 3...造血g6 system is a tough nut to crack and I feel the best approach is to carry on playing in the Colle-Zukertort style.

However, 4 造血c4!?, seeking a Grünfeld where White benefits from not yet having played 造血c3, leads to relatively unexplored positions where White can realistically fight for an advantage. However, after 4...造血g7 (4...造血c6 is also possible, with the solid but passive Schlechter Slav) 5 cxd5, Black does not have to go in for 5...\( \text{cxd5} \) 6 e4 \( \text{cxb6} \) 7 h3!?, but can try to extract a slow move from White by playing 5...0-0! Then 6 \( \text{xe2} \) (probably the most useful move which makes sure that Black’s knight will have no target when it captures on d5) 6...\( \text{cxd5} \) 7 e4 \( \text{c6} \) 8 \( \text{c3} \) \( \text{c6} \) 9 \( \text{e3} \) leads to a position that is quite well known from the \( 4 \text{cxd5 cxd5 5 e2} \) line of the Grünfeld, and generally considered playable for both sides, but not easy to handle if you arrive in it by surprise. Also, let’s not forget that even 6 \( \text{c3} \) \( \text{d5} \) is a slow form of Exchange Grünfeld that certainly has its drop of poison, and is not overladen with sharp theory. Anyway, this is a way to force Black to rely on his own resources from an early stage of the game.

4...\( \text{g7} \) 5 \( \text{b2} \) 0-0 (D)

6 \( \text{e2} \)

White’s main decision is where to post his light-squared bishop. The other possibility is to put it on d3 via 6 \( \text{bd2} \) \( \text{b6} \) 7 \( \text{d3} \). However, this has two drawbacks. Firstly, the bishop bites on granite as Black’s kingside fianchetto blunts its power; secondly, in some lines when Black plays ...c5 it may be useful to defend d4 with the queen or rook – then the bishop on d3 will get in the way. On the plus side, White’s set-up makes it harder for Black to move his knight to e4. 7...\( \text{a6} \) 8 c4 (White is keen to keep his light-squared bishop; this move is also part of White’s plan to attack Black’s centre) 8...\( \text{e6} \) 9 0-0 \( \text{c7} \) 10 \( \text{c2} \) (White is ready to break in the centre with e4, so Black counterattacks) 10...c5 11 \( \text{e5} \) (if you have studied carefully the chapter on the Colle-Zukertort, then you will be familiar with this move) 11...\( \text{xe5} \) 12 \( \text{dxe5} \) \( \text{c7} \) 13 f4 (White’s attack is not as powerful as usual because Black already has a good defensive position on the kingside; on the other hand the g7-bishop is obstructed by White’s pawn-chain and Black even suffers from some dark-square weaknesses) 13...\( \text{b7} \) 14 \( \text{d5} \) \( \text{e5} \) 15 \( \text{e4} \) \( \text{e7} \) (Black could pass with 15...d4 but after 16 \( \text{c4} \) the d6-square beckons) 16 \( \text{exd5} \) \( \text{exd5} \) 17 \( \text{ae1} \) \( \text{e8} \) 18 \( \text{e4} \) (with an eye on d6 and f6) 18...\( \text{xe4} \) (Black decides he cannot tolerate the knight, but giving up the bishop-pair is never an easy option) 19 \( \text{xe4} \) a6 20 a4 \( \text{h8} \) 21 \( \text{c4} \) and White was better in Remling-Wapner, Budapest 1994.

(Please note that for the sake of convenience I have adjusted the move-order of the opening of this game, which actually went 1 d4 \( \text{f6} \) 2 \( \text{f3} \) g6 3 b3 \( \text{g7} \) 4 \( \text{b2} \) 0-0 5 e3 d5.)

\textit{\textit{\textbf{5 we8}}}

Black could consider 5...\textit{\textit{\textbf{x}f3}} (we see more of this theme in the next game), but this allows White the additional possibility 6 \textit{\textit{\textbf{xb7}!}}? (White could of course simply recapture on f3 – compare lines given in the next game – but the move played is far more ambitious) 6...\( \text{c8-d7} \) 7 \text{gxf3} 8 \text{b8-c3} 9 \text{cxd4} 10 \text{dxc4} 11 \text{xe7} 12 \text{g1-0}\) 0-0 12 \text{h6} 13 \text{e8-0} 14 \text{e3} 15 \text{d6-f6} 15 \text{d3}\) ± Adly-Ashton, Port Erin 2005) 8 \text{xa7} 9 \text{c3-0} 10 \text{a4} (the queen makes a dash for it with her booty) 10...\text{c5} 11 \text{dxc5} 12 \text{c5-xc5} 12 \text{xc5-e2} (Black has a large lead in development but greedy players will like White’s position, and the onus is certainly on Black to prove he has compensation for the two-pawn deficit) 12...\text{dxc4} 13 \text{xc4-d5} 14 \text{d2-f6} 15 \text{e2-f8} (Black is now fully mobilized but White’s position is quite resilient) 16 0-0 (bravely putting his head in the lion’s mouth; the question is, does Black have a big enough bite?) 16...\text{h4} 17 \text{fd1} (good defence: White provides an escape-route for the king, should it become necessary) 17...\text{a5} (the problem for Black is he doesn’t have any support for his lone attacker on the kingside and this move aims to remedy that situation; however, there is a tactical problem) 18 \text{xd5!} (this looks risky, as it allows the black rook to enter the fray, but White has it all worked out) 18...\text{xd5} 19 \text{xa5} 20 \text{h1-g5+} 20 \text{h1} 21 \text{f2-xf2} 21 \text{g1-defends} 21 \text{c7!} (the key move to allow White to escape mate) 21...\text{e5} 22 \text{xe5} (another one bites the dust!) 22...\text{xe5} 23 \text{f4} 24 \text{c4} 25 \text{f3}. The white queen is brought into the defence and with her introduction the black attack falters. White’s large material advantage was eventually too much for Black in Iglesias-Perez, Havana 1970.

Again the capture on f3 is a possibility but only has independent value if Black chooses to castle queenside, viz. 6...\text{xf3} 7 \text{gxf3} 8 \text{xe4} 9 \text{bd7} 9 \text{e4} (White pursues a policy of central expansion rather than weakening Black first with an early f4-f5) 9...\text{b6} 10 \text{e2} 11 \text{e3-0} 0-0. Although it may seem that the white king has nowhere safe to go, the same could be said of Black; if Black castles kingside his king will be subjected to an attack on the g-file with the white f- and h-pawns being used as battering-rams, while on the queenside the half-open c-file is a cause for concern. Meanwhile, White’s central space advantage goes some way towards protecting his own king and gives White the manoeuvrability to attack on either wing. 12 \text{b5} 13 \text{b8} 14 (the a-pawn is a useful part of the attacking process since if Black decides to kick White’s knight with ...a6 at some stage, White can seriously consider just leaving his knight there in order to open the a-file against the black king) 13...\( \text{xc8} \) 14 \( \text{e7} \) 15 \( \text{fc1} \) (more and more pressure is brought to bear against Black’s queenside; moreover, Black lacks space and as a result lacks a good way to prevent \( \text{xc7} \)) 15...c6 16 \( \text{f4+} \) (winning a piece) 16...\( \text{d6} \) 17 \( \text{xd6+} \) \( \text{xd6} \) 18 \( \text{xd6} \) \( \text{xd6} \) 19 e5 \( \text{xd4} \) (19...\( \text{d5} \) 20 \( \text{c4} \)) 20 exf6 \( \text{xf6} \) 21 \( \text{d1} \) with a decisive material advantage for White, Green-Rex, Man vs Machine 1991.

7 \( \text{d2} \) \( \text{bd7} \) 8 \( \text{c1} \) \( \text{b8} \)

Or:

a) 8...\( \text{d6} \) hasn’t been tried since it was mishandled more than a century ago. 9 cxd5 exd5 10 \( \text{b5} \)! \( \text{b8} \) 11 \( \text{b4} \) is probably a key line.

b) 8...\( \text{e7} \) 9 \( \text{d3} \) 0-0 seems very sensible. After 10 cxd5 exd5 11 0-0 \( \text{xf3} \) 12 \( \text{xf3} \) chances are roughly balanced in an interesting position.

9 h3 \( \text{h5} \)

As we have seen, exchanging on f3 is no picnic for Black, so instead she retreats, hoping for a solid game.

10 g4

Not a chance! I played this game when I was still young and fearless.

10...\( \text{g6} \) 11 \( \text{h4} \) (D)

This move forms an important part of White’s strategy, as it bags the bishop-pair, thus compensating for his weakened kingside.

16 \( \text{xa4} \) 0-0 17 b4 a6 18 \( \text{c2} \)

18 \( \text{b3} \) is perhaps more accurate, but I wanted to keep an eye on the possibility of \( \text{e4} \).

18...\( \text{e8} \) 19 a4 \( \text{d6} \) 20 \( \text{b1} \)

A case of too many queen moves; it would be better to castle and prepare a b5 break.

24 bx6 \( \text{xa6} \) would have left my king in trouble, another reason why I should have castled earlier.

24...a5?!

24...\( \text{b5} \) is the acid test. In the cold light of day I have to admit White has insufficient compensation for the pawn.

25 \( \text{a2} \) \( \text{e6}?! \)

Black was clearly worried about the pressure on the a- and b-files following a capture on b5 and all I can say is it was a real stroke of luck! Bluff is an essential part of any killer’s repertoire.

26 \( \text{d2} \) \( \text{b6} \) 27 \( \text{c2} \) \( \text{d7} \) 28 \( \text{fc1} \) f5 29 \( \text{e1} \) \( \text{h7} \)

It is clearly too risky to take on b5 now.

Game 40

Hebden – Summerscale

Uppminster 1993

1 d4 d5 2 $f3 $f6 3 e3 c6

If 3...$f5 then 4 c4 c6 transposes to Game 41.

4 c4
We have now reached one of the most important sidelines of the Slav (indeed, 1 d4 d5 2 c4 c6 3 Qf3 Qf6 4 e3 was the actual move-order of the main game, but I have adjusted it to show how it fits into our repertoire). Nevertheless, by carefully choosing our options, we can still steer the game onto our turf and keep the theoretical burden to a minimum.

4...e6

This attempt to get an exciting Semi-Slav variation is neatly parried by White’s clever move-order.

4...g4 transposes to note ‘b’ to Black’s 4th move in Game 39, while 4...f5 is the subject of the next game. That leaves two significant moves:

a) 4...g6 is the Schlechter Slav, a solid if uninspiring hybrid form of the Slav and Grünfeld. Given its quiet nature, it is quite possible simply to play natural moves against it and expect to reach a viable position. The main lines continue 5 c3 g7 and then 6 e2 or 6 d3, with Black having various ideas with ...g4 and the central break ...e5, often preceded by an exchange on c4. It is interesting to note, however, that the Colle-Zukertort lookalike approach, 5 b3 g7 6 b2 0-0 7 d3 g4 8 bd2, has scored quite well for White, albeit in a small sample of games. This will certainly take a lot of Schlechter players out of their comfort zone, as their normal ...e5 ideas have had a firm clasp put on them.

b) 4...a6 is one of several forms of the ...a6 Slav, a highly trendy opening whose popularity spread like wildfire in the late 1990s and has by now reached mature and respectable status. However, this form of it – with White not yet having played c3 – is relatively poorly explored, and there is good reason to think it is less satisfactory for Black than other forms of the ...a6 Slav. One possible reply is our familiar set-up 5 d3 g4 6 bd2 e6 7 c2 bd7 8 b3 d6 9 b2, when White may keep an edge after 9...wb8 10 0-0 0-11 h3 h5 12 g5, while it is worth noting that Hebden’s preference has tended to be 5 d2.

5...bd7

5...c5 is a principled way to fight back immediately against the white centre, although I suspect the concept of moving the c-pawn twice in the first five moves will be alien to most players. 6 cxd5 exd5 (6...xd5 allows White a nice space advantage after 7 e4 f6 8 e5 d5 9 dxc5 xc5 10 e4 followed by d3 with attacking chances on the kingside, Staniszewski-Jagodzinski, Polish Team Ch, Lubniewice 1981) 7 b3 and now:

Game 41
Khenkin – L. Milov
Bad Homburg 2006

1 \(d4\) \(d5\) 2 \(\Box_f3\) \(\Box_f6\) 3 \(e3\) \(c6\) 4 \(c4\) \(\Box_f5\) \((D)\)
This is a very popular move. Black develops his light-squared bishop actively before supporting his centre with \(...e6\). This is one of the most important sidelines of the regular Slav (1 \(d4\) \(d5\) 2 \(c4\) \(c6\) 3 \(\Box_f3\) \(\Box_f6\) 4 \(e3\) \(\Box_f5\)), so we shall be choosing our repertoire lines carefully to avoid having to keep up-to-date with ever-changing opening theory.

5 \(cxd5\)
5 \(\Box_c3\) is more popular but we go for a slightly less well known system which contains quite a lot of venom if Black is ill-prepared.

5...\(cxd5\) 6 \(\Box_b3\) \(\Box_c7\)
6...\(\Box_b6\) 7 \(\Box_xb6\) axb6 8 \(\Box_c3\) is a bit better for White due to Black's weak doubled b-pawns.

7 \(\Box_d2\)
White's plan is to develop quickly and put pressure on Black along the open c-file. An early example was 7 \(\Box_c3\) \(e6\) 8 \(\Box_d2\) \(\Box_c6\) 9 \(\Box_b5\) \(\Box_e7\) 10 0-0 0-0 11 \(\Box_fc1\) intending \(\Box_e5\). Yusupov-P.Nikolić, Belgrade 1991. which was slightly better for White and certainly not very inspiring for Black.
The text-move is an attempt to refine this basic strategy by keeping the knight out of the c-file.

7...\(e6\)
7...\(\Box_c6\) is a somewhat less flexible move and after 8 \(\Box_b5\) \(e6\) 9 0-0 Black must show great care if he is to equalize:

a) 9...\(\Box_d6\) 10 \(\Box_b4\) 0-0 11 \(\Box xc6\) and now:
a1) After 11...\(\text{#xb4}\) 12 \(\text{#xb4} \text{#xc6}\) 13 \(\text{#e5} \text{#c7}\) (13...\(\text{#b6}\) is solid; e.g.,
Rizzitano-Fang, Marlborough 2004, White should try 18 f3 \(\text{#h5}\) (18...\(\text{#f5}\)
19 \(\text{#xd5} \text{#xc1}\) 20 \(\text{#e7}\) 21 \(\text{#xc1} \text{#xc1+ 22 #f2}\) is similar) 19 \(g4\) \(\text{#g6}\) 20 \(\text{#xd5!} \text{#xc1}\) 21 \(\text{#c7+ #f8}\) 22 \(\text{#xc1} \text{#xc1+ 23 #f2}\), when according to Rizzitano White has a clear advantage as the queen is much stronger than the two rooks.

a2) 11...\(\text{#xc6}\) 12 \(\text{#bd2}\) is also promising for White:

a21) 12...\(\text{#fb8}\) 13 \(\text{#xd6} \text{#xd6}\) 14 \(\text{#c3} \text{#b4}\) 15 \(\text{#xb4} \text{#xb4}\) 16 \(b3 \text{#d7}\)
17 \(\text{#fc1} \text{#b6}\) 18 \(\text{#c3} a5\) 19 \(a3\) ± Hebden-Arkell, London 1999.

a22) 12...\(\text{#ab8}\) 13 \(\text{#xd6} \text{#xd6}\) 14
\(\text{#c3} \text{#fc8}\) 15 \(\text{#fc1} \text{#d7}\) 16 \(\text{#b3}\) is slightly better for White, Hebden-Dimitrov, Montpellier 2005.

a23) 12...\(\text{#d7}\) 13 \(\text{#fc1} \text{#fc8}\) 14 \(\text{#a3} \text{#xb4}\) 15 \(\text{#xb4} c5\) 16 \(\text{#xc5} \text{#xc5}\) 17 \(\text{#c3} \text{#b6}\) 18 \(\text{#a3} \text{#d7}\) (after 18...\(\text{#c7}\) 19 \(\text{#ac1} \text{#ac8}\) 20 \(\text{#d4} \text{#g6}\), as in Nemet-Kreienbühl, Zurich 2005, 21
24 \(b5 \text{#b6}\) 25 \(\text{#b3} h6\) 26 \(\text{#e7}\) keeps an advantage for White) 19 \(\text{#ac1} \text{#xc3}\) 20 \(\text{#xc3} \pm\) Nemet-Burmakin, Berne 1999.

b) After 9...\(\text{#d7}\)! 10 \(\text{#c1}\) it seems Black can equalize with careful play:

b1) Palliser gives 10...\(\text{#e7}\) 11 \(\text{#b4}\)
\(\text{#xb4}\) 12 \(\text{#xb4} \text{#b6}\), when 13 \(\text{#b3}\)
0-0 14 \(\text{#xc6} \text{#fc8}\), with equality, is a useful tactical idea to be aware of.

Perhaps 13 \(\text{#a4} \text{#c8}\) 14 \(\text{#h4}\) is a better try for a small pull.

b2) After 10...\(\text{#c8}\) 11 \(\text{#a4} \text{#d6}\) 12 \(\text{#xc6} \text{#xc6}\) 13 \(\text{#b4}\) Black must still be careful:

b21) 13...\(\text{#xb4}\)!! 14 \(\text{#xb4} \text{#b6}\) (14...\(c5\) 15 \(\text{#xc5} \text{#xc5}\) 16 \(\text{#a3}\) a5
17 \(\text{#bd2} \text{#+-}\) 15 \(\text{#a3} c5\) 16 \(\text{#c3}\) ±.

b22) 13...0-0! 14 \(\text{#xd6} \text{#xd6}\) 15 \(\text{#bd2}\) (15 \(\text{#xa7} \text{#b8}\) also gives Black good counterplay) 15...\(c5\) 16 \(\text{#xc5} \text{#xc5}\) 17 \(\text{#xa7} \text{#d3}\) 18 \(\text{#xc8} \text{#xc8}\) led to an interesting position in Khenkin-Hector, Malmö 2006. Black probably has enough activity for the pawn but no more than that.

We now return to 7...\(e6\) (D):

\[\text{#b5+ #bd7??}\]

This is Black’s independent idea. For 8...\(\text{#c6}\) see the previous note.

(The actual move-order of the main game was 1 d4 d5 2 c4 c6 3 e3 \(\text{#f5}\) 4
\(\text{#xd5} \text{#xc5}\) 5 \(\text{#b3} \text{#c7}\) 6 \(\text{#b5+} \text{#d7}\) 7 \(\text{#d2} e6\) 8 \(\text{#f3} \text{#f6}\).)

9 \(\text{#c3}\)

An alternative try for White is 9 0-0
a6 10 \(\text{#e1}!!\); e.g., 10...\(\text{#b6}\) 11 \(\text{#e2}\) $d6 12 \text{c3} h6 13 \text{a4} \text{xb}3 14\text{axb}3 \text{c4} 15 \text{e}4 16 b4 \text{ab}8 17 \text{c5} \text{df}6 18 \text{b}6 \text{fc}8 19 b5 \text{axb}5 20 \text{xb}5 and White had a tiny edge in Tkachev-Wang Hao, Dagomys 2008.

$\text{a}6 10 \text{c}1 \text{b}6 11 \text{a}4 \text{d}8?!

11...\text{d}8! looks fully playable for Black.

12 \text{e}5! (D)

This tactical trick ensures White a useful initiative.

12...\text{e}7

After 12...\text{axb}5 13 \text{xb}5 White’s threats are decisive.

13 \text{xd}7+ \text{xd}7 14 \text{d}1?!

White threatens \text{a}5.

14...\text{b}5 15 \text{xb}5 \text{axb}5

Now the b-pawns are vulnerable and Black must play accurately in order to fight for equality.

16 a3 \text{xe}5 17\text{dxe}5 \text{d}7 18 \text{e}2 \text{c}8 19 \text{c}3 \text{f}6 20 \text{hd}1!

White maintains his initiative by tactical means.

20...\text{g}6

20...\text{fxe}5 21 e4 \text{g}6 leads to the same position.

21 e4 \text{fxe}5 22 \text{exd}5 \text{exd}5

It seems that 22...b4 23 \text{axb}4 \text{xb}4 is almost equal.

23 \text{xd}5 (D)

White has a pleasant advantage.

23...\text{xc}1 24 \text{xc}1 \text{d}6 25 \text{b}4 \text{e}4?!

25...\text{xb}4 26 \text{xb}4 \text{f}7 probably gives Black better chances to save the game.

26 \text{c}3 \text{xb}4 27 \text{xe}4 \text{e}7 28 \text{c}5+ \text{xc}5 29 \text{xc}5 \text{b}4 30 \text{axb}4

White’s extra pawn may not count for much in itself, but he is more active and Black still has pawn weaknesses.

30...\text{d}6 31 \text{b}5 \text{b}8 32 \text{e}3 \text{b}6 33 \text{e}4 \text{f}8 34 \text{d}5+ \text{c}7 35 \text{d}2 \text{f}4+ 36 \text{xe}5 \text{xb}4

The extra pawn and better king position ensure an easy win.

37 f4 \text{c}6 38 g4 \text{b}5+ 39 \text{e}6 \text{b}4 40 \text{c}2+ \text{b}7 41 \text{f}2 \text{c}4 1-0
5 Classical Queen’s Indian

Introduction

Before we look at the variations relating to the Classical Queen’s Indian, I would like to show you a game which will help to explain some of the problems White can have if he continues with the standard Colle-Zukertort set-up in cases where Black has opted for a queen’s fianchetto but avoided an early ...d5.

Game 42
Summerscale – Palkövi
Budapest 1990

1  ♜f3  ♜f6 2 d4 e6 3 e3 c5 4  ♓d3 b6 5 0-0  ♣b7 6  ♓bd2  ♣e7

One problem I found as a Colle-Zukertort player against Queen’s Indian exponents was that their positions had so much flexibility. This was mainly due to the fact that they could delay ...d5 for as long as they wanted, thus making it harder to carry out the standard plan of  ♓e5, f4, etc. In fact, I used to heave a sigh of relief as soon as they did play ...d5 (which wasn’t very often). I think this game clearly illustrates the problems White can face because of Black’s flexibility.

7 b3 cxd4 8 exd4  ♕c6 9  ♣b2  ♑b4 10  ♓e2  ♓bd5 (D)

Black is playing the opening quite creatively and is making full use of the d5-square from an early stage. I had severe reservations about my next move but was loathe to allow the black knight into f4.

11 g3

A more recent game confirmed that 11 a3  ♔f4 is indeed uncomfortable for White: 12  ♘c4  ♕c7 13  ♘e1  ♘c8 14 c3 g5!? 15  ♘f1 g4 16  ♘e5  ♘g8 17  ♘d3?  ♘h3+! 18  ♘h1 g3!? (18...d5 19  ♘c4  ♘d4 is also very strong) 19  ♘xg3  ♘xf2+! 20  ♘xf2  ♕xg3 0-1 Reefschlager-Ákesson, Bad Wiessee 2005.

11...♗b4

The knight on d5 shows it also has eyes for my queenside and, not wanting to give up the bishop-pair, I was forced to make a grovelling retreat.

12  ♔b1  ♘e4
It felt as if the black knights were crawling all over my position.

13 \( \text{Wd3 f5} \) 14 \( \text{Ce5 g5} \)

Here Black sees a forcing continuation and goes for it, but with hindsight perhaps simply 14...0-0 would have kept the advantage.

15 \( \text{Ed1} \)

Making an escape-square for my king, which lacks light-squared protection.

15...\( \text{Kh3+} \) 16 \( \text{Ff1 Df4} \) (D)

This is the idea Black was playing for, and to be honest I had completely missed it. Still, there was no use in worrying about it – I just had to knuckle down and take what was thrown at me. In retrospect, I now question Black’s decision to win my queen and a pawn for three pieces, as I believe the material imbalance favours White.

22 \( \text{Ff3 Gg4+} \) 23 \( \text{Ff1 Wh3+} \) 24 \( \text{Gg1} \)

I would have been very happy with a draw here as I was only an average international player while my opponent was a much higher rated international master. I knew the onus was on him to make something of the position.

24...\( \text{Wh4+} \) 25 \( \text{Ff1 d5} \) 26 \( \text{e4 Wh3+} \)

27 \( \text{Gg1 Wh4+} \) 28 \( \text{Ff1 0-0} \) 29 \( \text{a3 Wh3+} \) 30 \( \text{Gg1 Wh4+} \) 31 \( \text{Ff1 Dd6} \) 32 \( \text{Cc3 Wh3+} \) 33 \( \text{Gg1 Ff6} \)

Finally Black makes an aggressive move towards my king.

The game was adjourned at this point and I was enormously grateful to another English junior at the time, Gary Quillan, who spotted the way to trap Black's queen from this position.

So it all turned out right in the end (apart from missing the plane home, but that's another story!). However, I don't think many players would take the white position by choice after move 12. A more aggressive system for White that keeps a firm eye on the crucial d5-square is the Classical Queen's Indian. By utilizing a Colle-Zukertort move-order, we avoid some of Black's most significant options. Black can try to confuse the issue, as in the next game, but White keeps a clear head and rises to the occasion.

\end{center}

It is via this move-order that the Classical Queen's Indian plays a part in our recommended repertoire. Black has not played an early ...d5, so White abandons the Colle-Zukertort set-up, and instead transposes to a Queen's Indian line (you'll find it in the theory books under 1 d4 \textit{\texttt{f}f}6 2 c4 e6 3 \textit{\texttt{f}f}3 b6 4 e3). Note that by using this move-order, White has cut out many possibilities that are available to Black in a standard Queen's Indian, most notably all options of ...\textit{\texttt{b}b}4+ (we have also totally circumvented the Bogo-Indian, 1 d4 \textit{\texttt{f}f}6 2 c4 e6 3 \textit{\texttt{f}f}3 \textit{\texttt{b}b}4+). Note that if Black had played ...d5 at any stage, White could have kept his c-pawn on c2, and transposed back to a Colle-Zukertort.

\begin{center}
\textbf{B}
\end{center}

(The move-order in the actual game was 1 d4 \textit{\texttt{f}f}6 2 \textit{\texttt{f}f}3 e6 3 c3 b6 4 e3 \textit{\texttt{b}b}7 5 \textit{\texttt{d}d}3 c5 6 0-0.)

6...\textit{\texttt{c}c}7 7 \textit{\texttt{c}c}3 cxd4 8 exd4 d5 (or 8...\textit{\texttt{d}d}6 9 d5) 9 cxd5 \textit{\texttt{x}d}5 10 \textit{\texttt{e}e}5 is the main line we consider later. Here Black plays more ambitiously, trying for a double fianchetto. In the main lines the most important decision for Black is whether he should allow the cramping d5 by White. If he doesn’t want to, he must play ...d5 himself, after which White takes and we get an IQP position where White has attacking chances on the kingside.

7  Qc3 g7 8 e4

It makes sense to take the space in the centre that Black has so graciously offered. White risks being a tempo down compared to certain lines where e4 is achieved in one move but the position is not very tempo-sensitive as there usually is a lot of slow manoeuvring. 8 d5 is a somewhat more popular way of seizing space, though compared with the lines we examine in Game 45, Black is better organized for a transition to a Benoni structure.

8...cxd4 9 Qxd4 d6

There are lots of transpositional possibilities for both sides. However, after 9...0-0, White can try to change the pawn-structure with 10 Qdb5!? d6 11 Qf4 (or 11 c2!? Qe8 12 Qf4) 11...e5, although 12 g5 a6 13 a3 Qbd7 14 b4 Qc8 15 Qd2 a5 left the position fairly equal in Djurhuus-T.R.Hansen, Norwegian Ch, Hamar 2007.

10 Qe3 0-0 11 f3 a6

We have now reached a Hedgehog position. White’s plan is to put pressure on Black on the dark squares and keep a close eye on the black pawn-breaks, ...d5 and ...b5.

It’s also possible to delay this development, as this will make the d5 advance a little less attractive for White (in a Benoni structure, as we shall see in Game 45, the move ...  ₕb7 is often even worse than a clear loss of a tempo). A typical example was the game Inkiov-Sofronie, Predeal 2006 where after 4...c5 5 0-0  ₕe7 6 c4 0-0 7  ₕc3 d6 8 b3  ₕbd7 9  ₕb2 a6 10 a4 Black had run out of useful waiting moves. 5 0-0 c5 6 c4  ₕe7 7  ₕc3 (D)

The main difference between the Classical Queen’s Indian and the Colle-Zukertort System we examined before is the positioning of White’s queen’s knight. This is more actively posted on c3 than on d2; indeed White often counts on this greater central influence to give him the advantage against inaccurate black responses.

7...cxd4

This exchange lessens the impact of White’s possible d5 advance, as Black will have extra freedom to manoeuvre. Other moves:

a) 7...0-0? is discussed in our next game.

10 \textit{D}g5 (D)

This is one of the two most critical lines; the other is 10 \textit{A}h4?.

10 \textit{A}e1 is a more sedate positional approach, but after 10...\textit{D}bd7 11 \textit{A}b1
White prepares to take advantage of Black’s queenside weaknesses, and push his pawn-majority, viz. 11...0-0 12 b4 c8 13 d2 a6 14 a4 c8 15 b3 f5 16 f1 f7 17 d2 f6 18 a5 (White has prepared well for this pawn-lever, which gives him an outpost on a5 and isolates Black’s a-pawn) 18...bxa5 19 xxa5 ± Malaniuk-Lysenko, Russia Cup, Ekaterinburg 1997.

Practice has also seen 10...0-0, which gets the king to relative safety, and 10...h6, putting the immediate question to White’s knight:

a) 10...0-0 11 f4 (this is an extremely desirable move, positionally speaking, as White introduces the ideas of either playing f5, making it harder for Black to push his kingside pawn-majority, or as in the game opening the f-file, in order to attack the black king) 11...exf4? 12 xf4 bd7 13 b3 e8 14 h3 f8 15 e1 (White enjoys a clear advantage due to the superior mobility of his forces; at the same time his space advantage restricts the manoeuvrability of the black bishops) 15...a6 16 d2 c8 17 h4 h6 18 xf7! (with most of White’s pieces pointing towards the black king, this sacrifice highlights the weaknesses and lack of harmony in the black camp) 18...xf7 19 xh6! gxh6 20 xe7+! 1-0 Høi-U.Nielsen, Gausdal 1990.

b) 10...h6 11 ge4 xe4 12 xe4 and now:

b1) 12...g6 (this is an extremely ambitious approach, aiming to push the kingside pawns before completing development) 13 f4 f5 14 fxe5 dxe5 (14...fxe4 15 xe4 gives White a huge initiative for the piece) 15 g3 c8 16 xf5 xf5 17 xf5 gxf5 18 h5+ d7 19 xf5 c7 20 xe5 with three pawns and an attack for the piece, Danner-Siegel, Swiss Team Ch 1993.

b2) 12...0-0 13 h5 d7 14 xh6!

This intuitive piece sacrifice gives White a huge attack, with a perpetual check available as a ‘safety-net’. 14...gxh6 15 xh6 f5 16 g6+ h8 17 f4? (White boldly goes for it, but this attempt to open lines is not the most effective continuation; 17 $g3! would be my suggested improvement as after 17...e4 18 $xf5 $xf5 19 $xe4 $f8 20 $h6+ $g8 21 $xf5 White has four pawns, a rook and an overwhelming position for two pieces; 17 $ae1! is also strong) 17...fxe4 18 $xe4 $f6 19 $h6+ $g8 20 $g5+ (by this point, 20 $h3 was White’s only way to seek more than a draw, but 20...$xe4 21 $h3 $h4 22 $xh4 $xh4 23 $xh4 $xf4 24 $e7 $a6 is not risk-free for White) 20...$h8 21 $h6+ $g8 22 $g6 e4 23 f5? (23 f5 still achieves a draw) 23...$c7 24 $f4 $d8 25 $h4 $g7 and Black has defended himself, K.Berg-Ward, London 1989.

11...g6?

11...a6 is a more solid approach: 12 b3 $c7 13 a4 (White uses this standard push to dissuade Black from any ideas of...b5 and to introduce the possibility of $a3) 13...$c5+ (this is too optimistic, but a more cautious approach such as 13...0-0 would allow White his normal plan of queenside expansion) 14 $h1 $d4 (this early queen sortie is easily repulsed and amounts to a loss of time) 15 $c2 $c5 16 $e2 e4 17 $d1 $d3 18 $xd3 exd3 19 $xd3 gave White a clear material and positional advantage in the game Kharkova-Litinskaya, Polish Team Ch, Lubniewice 1994.

12...h6?!

Black mistakenly kicks the white knight, assuming that it will retreat. 12...0-0 is a better option, although after 13 fxg6 hxg6 14 $e1, with the idea of $h4, White’s attacking prospects give him the advantage.

13 $e6! fx e6?

Black’s best try is 13...$c8! 14 $a4 (with the idea of 15 fxg6 ++) 14...g5 and now Polgar gave 15 $db5(?!?) fx e6 16 fxe6, analysing 16...$c5(?!?) 17 $xd6++ as very good for White. However, 16...0-0! 17 exd7 $c5+ 18 $h1 $e4 is far from clear, so White should play 15 $e3, completing development before taking further action. Then Black has serious difficulties.

14 fx e 6 \( \text{\textit{\textbf{f8}} \textit{c5}} \)

This is a clear positional mistake as it allows White either a solid space advantage that Black is ill-placed to contest, or a very strong attack against the black king, as demonstrated in this game.

8 \( \text{d5!} \text{xd5} \)
9 \( \text{cx} \text{d5} (D) \)

- Black is faced with a difficult decision as to whether he should take the d-pawn.

9...\( \text{xd5} \)

This capture is playing with fire, but the alternative is not much more palatable: 9...\( \text{d6} \) (Black declines the proffered pawn but suffers from being stuck in a very bad Benoni: both black bishops are ineffectively placed)
10 \( \text{e4} \). As in the Benoni, the main hope of counterplay for Black lies in pushing his queenside pawn-majority, but Black suffers here in that the bishop is getting in the way on b7; Black will have to lose at least two tempi if he is to achieve ...\( \text{b5} \) and this alone is enough to ensure that Black will never achieve full equality. Now:

12 \(\text{wh}4\)

A decade ago 12 \(\text{wh}3\)?! (D) was an untried suggestion by Keith Arkell.

Now it has enjoyed a few outings but there are still more questions than answers:

a) 12...\(\text{a}6\)?! 13 \(\text{d}d1\) \(\text{xd}3\) 14 \(\text{xd}3\) \(\text{a}6\) 15 \(\text{h}6\) \(\text{c}e8\) 16 \(\text{g}3\) ± (16 \(\text{d}ad1\) is also good) 16...\(\text{xd}4\)?! 17 \(\text{f}3\) \(\text{wd}8\) 18 \(\text{d}d1\) \(\text{wb}8\) 19 \(\text{d}d7\)?! (21 \(\text{wh}5\) may improve) 21...\(\text{f}4\) and chances were relatively balanced in M.Richter-B.Socko, Bundesliga 2005/6.

b) 12...\(\text{xd}4\) 13 \(\text{c}e1\) (13 \(\text{g}5\)?) and now:

b1) 13...\(\text{c}c6\) 14 \(\text{c}b5\)!! (18...\(\text{f}5\) is necessary) 19 \(\text{wh}6\) \(\text{f}5\) (19...\(\text{fd}8\) 20 \(\text{c}e3\) \(\text{c}xe3\) 21 \(\text{c}f6+\) \(\text{xf}6\) 22 \(\text{h}7+\) \(\text{h}8\) 23 \(\text{g}6+\) \(\text{g}8\) 24 \(\text{wh}7+\) \(\text{f}8\) 25 \(\text{xf7}#) 20 \(\text{g}5\) \(\text{xe}5\) 21 \(\text{wg}5+\) \(\text{f}7\) 22 \(\text{xf}5\) \(\text{exf}5\) 23 \(\text{d}51\) +--.

We now return to 12 \(\text{wh}4\) (D):

12...\(\text{c}e4\)

This very direct approach has scored reasonably for Black but I believe there is a way for White to gain the advantage. Black’s main alternatives are:

a) 12...\(\text{c}6\)? (over-aggressive; this is a very careless, yet seemingly natural move, that an unsuspecting opponent might make without much thought) 13 \textcolor{red}{\text{\texttt{\textbf{A}}} \texttt{g5}} (it is still not obvious at a glance that Black is teetering on the brink of total collapse) 13...\texttt{g6}? b) 12...\texttt{\texttt{c}bd}7 (this is the most solid approach) 13 \texttt{\texttt{d}d}1 \texttt{\texttt{e}e}4!? (13...\texttt{\texttt{c}c}8 \pm continues in a solid vein; then White will complete his development and play for a kingside attack) 14 \texttt{\texttt{w}h}3 \texttt{\texttt{d}df}6 (if Black thought he had the position firmly under control, he was rudely awakened by White’s next move, but it appears that all is not lost) 15 \texttt{\texttt{d}d}5! (White’s thematic central breakthrough) 15...\texttt{\texttt{c}xc}3 16 \texttt{bxc}3 \texttt{\texttt{d}d}5 (after 16...\texttt{ex}d5? 17 \texttt{\texttt{d}d}7! Black had nothing better than 17...\texttt{h}6, allowing 18 \texttt{\texttt{c}xf8}, in Chatalbashv-Pogorelov, Benidorm 2007) 17 \texttt{\texttt{g}g}5 and now:

b1) After 17...\texttt{h}6? 18 \texttt{\texttt{c}x}h6 \texttt{gx}h6 19 \texttt{\texttt{w}x}h6 the first edition of this book stated that “the concealed attack of White’s rook on d1 against the black queen on d8 makes defence almost impossible for Black” and gave the lines 19...\texttt{c}c8 (or 19...\texttt{w}e8; alternatively 19...\texttt{\texttt{c}d}6 loses to 20 \texttt{\texttt{g}g}4++; 20 \texttt{\texttt{g}g}5+ \texttt{\texttt{w}h}8 21 \texttt{\texttt{g}g}4 \texttt{\texttt{x}g}4 22 \texttt{\texttt{h}h}5+ \texttt{\texttt{g}g}7 23 \texttt{\texttt{x}g}4+ \texttt{\texttt{h}h}8 24 \texttt{\texttt{h}h}5+ \texttt{\texttt{g}g}7 25 \texttt{\texttt{h}h}7+ \texttt{\texttt{f}f}6 26 \texttt{\texttt{h}h}6+ \texttt{\texttt{e}e}5 27 \texttt{\texttt{c}c}4 \pm. Remarkably, the game Yusupov-Beliavsky, Austrian Team Ch 1998/9 concluded 19...\texttt{c}c7 20 \texttt{\texttt{g}g}5+ \texttt{\texttt{h}h}8 21 \texttt{\texttt{w}h}4+ 1-0. Is it fair to assume that White had read the book and Black hadn’t?)

b2) 17...\texttt{g}6 18 \texttt{\texttt{w}h}4! gives White powerful threats of \texttt{c}4 and \texttt{\texttt{g}g}4. However, this may not be the end of the story, since after 18...\texttt{h}6 19 \texttt{\texttt{\texttt{x}g}6}?! (as played in Zsu.Polgar-Christiansen, San Francisco 1991; neither 19 \texttt{\texttt{w}h}6 \texttt{\texttt{g}g}4 nor 19 \texttt{\texttt{c}x}h6 \texttt{\texttt{d}d}7 is especially clear) 19...\texttt{hx}g5 20 \texttt{\texttt{w}x}g5 \texttt{fx}g6 21 \texttt{\texttt{w}x}g6+ \texttt{\texttt{h}h}8 22 \texttt{\texttt{d}d}3 (given by Rogers as winning for White, but 22 \texttt{\texttt{c}c}4 looks a better try) 22...\texttt{\texttt{h}h}7 23 \texttt{\texttt{h}h}3 \texttt{\texttt{h}h}4, White has nothing very convincing.

14 \texttt{\texttt{f}f}4

The first edition of this book suggested 14 \texttt{\texttt{c}xf}7 \texttt{\texttt{x}f}7 15 \texttt{\texttt{c}xe}4 \texttt{\texttt{c}xe}4 16 \texttt{\texttt{w}g}4 as an improvement, reckoning that after regaining his piece White would have a distinct endgame advantage due to the weak isolated pawn on e6 and his strong square on e4. More recent games have indicated that this is to a large extent compensated by Black’s better development. Some examples:

6 Anti-Benoni

Introduction and Unusual Systems

Game 47
Hodgson – Martin Gonzalez
Seville 1987

1 d4 ♜f6 2 ♜f3 c5

With this move Black is trying to steer the game into a Benoni type of position. The problem for White is that there is no really good way to avoid this. What White can do, though, is enter a Benoni structure on his own terms and take a lot of the fun away from Black.

3 d5 (D)

This forthright move, gaining space in the centre, is undoubtedly best. After 3 e3 g6 4 ♜d3 ♜g7 the benefits of Black’s flexible development become apparent, as he has not yet committed himself to ...d5. White will have to choose between c3 and b3 at some stage but both moves will take us outside the scope of the repertoire. After 3 d5 Black is faced with a choice between direct central conflict and quiet development.

3...e6

This is the most direct move: Black challenges White to enter a Benoni with 4 c4. The Benoni is an extremely dangerous opening and play often becomes quite sharp. This is exactly what Benoni players want and I recommend a way of keeping the tactics to a minimum.

3...d6 4 ♜c3 will most likely transpose to other lines in this chapter: for 4...e6 5 e4 see Games 49-51, while 4...g6 5 e4 ♜g7 is Game 53. Only 4...e5 remains, when 5 e4 is like a Czech Benoni where White has additional freedom to act thanks to the c4-square, while Black can’t quickly play ...♜g5. Compare the line 1 d4 c5 2 d5 e5, discussed in the notes to Game 68.

Another alternative, of a totally different nature, is 3...c4, the so-called Hawk Variation, which is a recommendation of Stefan Bücker. If White reacts sensibly it fails to impress. 4 ♜c3 ♜a5 5 ♜d2 (5 ♜d2 is the other theoretically approved way of getting the advantage, but the text-move is a lot less complex) 5...\(\texttt{\textdollar}xd5\) (more or less forced, else White will achieve a turbo-charged Benoni after e4) 6 e4 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xc3\) 7 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xc3\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}c5\) (after 7...\(\texttt{\textdollar}c7\) 8 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d2\) e6 9 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xc4\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}c6\) 10 0-0 Black has problems unravelling his kingside) 8 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d4\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd4\) 9 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd4\) a6 10 a4 b6 11 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xc4\) (White has a large lead in development, which allows him to attack the black position) 11...\(\texttt{\textdollar}b7\) 12 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d5\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd5\) 13 exd5 e5 (Black drives away the strongly posted white knight; however, putting his pawns on dark squares only makes his bishop worse) 14 \(\texttt{\textdollar}f5\) d6 15 \(\texttt{\textdollar}e2\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}d7\) 16 \(\texttt{\textdollar}e3\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}c7\) (played in order to develop the queenside) 17 a5 b5 18 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d2\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}d7\) 19 c4 (with a lead in development it is logical to open lines for your pieces to exploit) 19...\(\texttt{\textdollar}xc4\) 20 \(\texttt{\textdollar}hc1\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}b7\) 21 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xc4\) (the black kingside pieces are sitting idly by, but development is not easy) 21...\(\texttt{\textdollar}c8\) (or 21...\(\texttt{\textdollar}c7\) 22 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xf5\) 22 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xc8\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xc8\) 23 \(\texttt{\textdollar}c1+\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}b7\) 24 \(\texttt{\textdollar}c6\) (targeting the weak points on a6 and d6) 24...\(\texttt{\textdollar}d6\) 25 \(\texttt{\textdollar}b6+\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}a7\) 26 \(\texttt{\textdollar}b4\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}e7\) 27 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd6\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd6\) 28 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd6\) and White converted his material advantage in Hoi-Liardet, Geneva 1991.

4 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xc3\) (D) 4...
\(\texttt{\textdollar}a5?!\)

This attempt to hold up the e4 advance and prepare queenside counterplay falls short. Another possibility is 4...\(g6?!\) 5 e4 d6 (to prevent e5) 6 \(\texttt{\textdollar}b5+\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}d7\) 7 dxe6 (highlighting the drawbacks in Black’s move-order; 7 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd7\) is also not bad, because after 7...\(\texttt{\textdollar}xd7\) 8 0-0 \(\texttt{\textdollar}g7\) 9 dxe6 fxe6 10 \(\texttt{\textdollar}f4\) e5 11 \(\texttt{\textdollar}g5\) 0-0 12 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xf6\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xf6\) 13 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d5\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}c6\) 14 c3 White enjoyed a positional advantage in Vaisman-Nemirovski, French Ch, Epinal 1989) 7...\(\texttt{\textdollar}xe6\) 8 \(\texttt{\textdollar}g5\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xb5\) 9 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xb5\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}a5+\) 10 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d2\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xb5\) 11 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xf6\) is good for White, as Black’s king is unsafe; e.g., 11...\(\texttt{\textdollar}g8\) 12 \(\texttt{\textdollar}g5\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}d7\) 13 0-0±.

4...b5!? can be met with a counter-gambit: 5 dxe6 fxe6 6 e4?! b4 7 \(\texttt{\textdollar}b5\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xe4\) (7...a6 8 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d6+\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd6\) 9 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd6\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xe4\) 10 \(\texttt{\textdollar}e5\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}b7\) 11 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xg7\) ± Ortega-Piscoaco, Arvier 2009) 8 \(\texttt{\textdollar}f4\) d6 (8...\(\texttt{\textdollar}a6\) 9 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d3\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}f6\) 10 \(\texttt{\textdollar}g5\) ±) 9 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d2!\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd2\) (9...\(\texttt{\textdollar}xf6\) 10 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xf3\) ±) 10 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xd2\) ±.

This is the only sensible continuation. 5...\(\texttt{\textdollar}b6\) has been treated very roughly after 6 e4:

a) 6...\(\texttt{\textdollar}exd5\) 7 e5 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xe2\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}e4\) 9 0-0 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xc3\) 10 bxc3 \(\texttt{\textdollar}e7\) 11 \(\texttt{\textdollar}g5\) \(\texttt{\textdollar}xg5\) (Black has grave difficulties after 11...\(\texttt{\textdollar}xe5\) 12 \(\texttt{\textdollar}d3\) 12 \(\texttt{\textdollar}xg5\) 0-0 13 \(\texttt{\textdollar}f4\) gave White a comfortable advantage in Kosten-Kalwa, Naujac 2000.

b) 6...\(\texttt{\textdollar}g6\) 7 \(\texttt{\textdollar}e5\) (with the idea of \(\texttt{\textdollar}c4\)) 7...\(\texttt{\textdollar}c7\) 8 \(\texttt{\textdollar}c4\) a6 9 \(\texttt{\textdollar}f3\) (thanks to Black’s time-wasting, White has secured a large initiative by simple moves) 9...\textit{g7} 10 \textit{f4} \textit{d8} 11 \textit{d6}+ \textit{f8} 12 \textit{g5} exd5 13 \textit{xd5} 1-0 Morant-Jarvela, Finnish Team Ch 1986.

6...\textit{b6} keeps the queen active but allows White to weaken the black kingside. 7 \textit{xf6}+ \textit{xf6} 8 e4 gives Black these options:

a) 8...\textit{g8} 9 c4 bxc4 10 \textit{c3} \textit{b7} (10...\textit{a6} 11 g3 f5?! 12 \textit{g2} fxe4 13 \textit{f6} {13...\textit{g7} ±} 14 dxex6 dxe5 15 exf7+ \textit{xf7} 16 \textit{xe4} 1-0 S.Schneider-C.Olsson, Swedish Team Ch 2006/7) 11 \textit{xex4} (White sacrifices the g-pawn to accelerate his attack) 11...\textit{fg2} 12 \textit{h4} \textit{g5} 13 \textit{e2} \textit{e7} 14 0-0-0 \textit{a6} 15 \textit{xax6} \textit{xa6} 16 \textit{f3} \textit{xa2} 17 e5! with a big initiative and full compensation for the sacrificed material, Åkesson-Hector, Malmö 1986.

b) 8...\textit{b7} 9 c4 \textit{g8} (9...b4?! 10 \textit{d3} f5?! 11 0-0 fxe4 12 \textit{xe4} f5 13 \textit{f6} fxe4 14 \textit{h5}+ \textit{d8} 15 \textit{f7}+ -- Polovodin-Tetenkina, Tula 1999) 10 b3 \textit{a6} 11 \textit{c3} \textit{c7} 12 \textit{d2} 0-0-0 13 \textit{a5} \textit{d6} 14 0-0-0 bxc4 15 bxc4 \textit{g4} 16 \textit{w2} is unclear, Todorov-Badev, Sunny Beach 2006.

7 \textit{xf6}+ \textit{xf6} 8 e4 (D)

The big problems for Black here are his severely misplaced queen and queenside pawn weaknesses.

8...\textit{g6} 9 \textit{e2} \textit{e7} 10 0-0-0 0-0 11 \textit{e5} \textit{f6} 12 \textit{g4} \textit{g6}

This is Black’s sixth queen move by move 12, a sure sign that the opening hasn’t gone according to plan.

13 h4

White already has a large advantage and, to add insult to injury, the queen is now used as a target to start White’s kingside attack.

13...\textit{exd5} 14 \textit{exd5} \textit{d6} 15 g3 c4?

Black is fiddling while his position burns. It is no surprise that this attempt at a ‘pawn-storm’ fails with all the queenside pieces undeveloped.

16 \textit{g2} \textit{b7}? 17 \textit{f4}

Winning material or forcing mate!

17...\textit{c5} 18 d6 \textit{g2} 19 dxe7 \textit{e8} 20 \textit{f6}+! (D)

20...\textit{xf6} 21 \textit{g4}+ 1-0

21...\textit{h8} 22 \textit{h6} would be the humiliating end.
4...exd5

Game 48
Karpov – Topalov
Dos Hermanas 1994

1 d4 ∆f6 2 ∆f3 c5 3 d5 e6 4 ∆c3 ∆xd5

4...exd5 5 ∆xd5 ∆xd5 6 ∆xd5 leads to the same position, of course. Either way, by making the exchange immediately, Black makes sure that a white pawn doesn’t remain on d5.

4...d6 is the subject of the next three games.

5 ∆xd5 exd5 6 ∆xd5 ∆e7

After 6...d6 7 e4 ∆c6, the move 8 ∆e2 is plausible, and transposes to the game continuation following 8...∆e7 9 0-0 0-0. However, Black also has 8...∆e6, when 9 ∆g5 ∆b6 10 c3 h6 11 ∆g3 0-0 0-0 12 0-0 was far from clear in Hebden-Tebb, British League (4NCL) 1999/00. Therefore White probably should go for the critical 8 ∆g5:

a) 8...∆e7 9 ∆c4 ∆d8?! (9...f6!?)

8...∆c6 9 c3 d6 10 0-0 just transposes.

9 0-0 ∆c6

9...∆d7 10 ∆d1 ∆f6 11 ∆d3 is a little better for White, who can intensify his bind on d5 by c4.

10 c3

The key to this variation for White is to keep a careful eye on Black’s freeing ...d5 break, which, although difficult to prevent in the long run, must be discouraged at present. Here

This is a key component in wrestling control of the d-file.

This position appears completely equal, which makes it even more impressive how Karpov graduallycreeps up on his top-class opponent.

19...\( \text{a}d8 \) 20 \( \text{d}2 \)

White’s main idea for the moment is to try to gain control of the d-file without allowing too many simplifying exchanges.

Mission accomplished! The d-file now belongs to White – thus the first small advantage is accumulated. The knight on e3 is significant in reducing Black’s possibilities on the e-file.

25...\textit{\texttt{e8}} 26 \textit{\texttt{h3}} \textit{\texttt{g5}} 27 \textit{\texttt{f3}}

Karpov sticks to his policy of keeping pieces on the board.

27...\textit{\texttt{g7}} 28 \textit{\texttt{f4}}

Suddenly the black queen is embarrassed for squares.

28...\textit{\texttt{e7}}

Other moves are no better: 28...\textit{\texttt{h4}} 29 g3 doesn’t help, while 28...\textit{\texttt{h5}} 29 \textit{\texttt{hxh5 gxh5}} is not the sort of endgame to play against the master of exploiting small advantages, and 28...\textit{\texttt{f6}} 29 \textit{\texttt{hxh6+}} costs Black his queen.

29 \textit{\texttt{d5}} \textit{\texttt{e4}} 30 \textit{\texttt{f6!!}} (D)

This skewer followed by a fork of Black’s two bishops was the fiendish idea behind White’s 30th move.

Black resigned, seeing no good answer to \textit{\texttt{c7}} and not wanting an endgame lesson.

Black now has an important choice between exchanging pawns on d5 (see Games 50 and 51) and trying to retain some flexibility by delaying that exchange – we focus on the latter approach here.

5...a6

This is played to prevent the threat of \textit{\texttt{b5+}}. If 5...\textit{\texttt{e7}} then 6 \textit{\texttt{b5+}} gives Black a choice of ways to reach an inferior position:

a) 6...\(\text{Q}d7\)? (this is just plain bad) 7 dxe6 fxe6 8 \(\text{Q}e5\) (Black has no good way to prevent the knight's arrival on e6) 8...\(\text{W}a5\) 9 \(\text{Q}xe6++\) \(\text{Q}xe4\) (Black rests his meagre hopes on a counterattack but is helpless against the white onslaught) 10 \(\text{Q}xg7+\) \(\text{Q}f7\) 11 \(\text{W}h5+\) \(\text{Q}xg7\) 12 \(\text{Q}h6+\) \(\text{Q}f6\) (12...\(\text{Q}g8\) 13 \(\text{W}d5\!) 13 \(\text{W}f3+\) 1-0 Machulsky-Rios, Philadelphia 1992. Black decided he'd had enough because after 13...\(\text{Q}g6\) 14 \(\text{W}xe4+\) \(\text{Q}xh6\) 15 \(\text{W}xe7\) White will have recaptured the sacrificed material with interest and still have a powerful attack.

b) 6...\(\text{Q}d7\) leads to a small endgame advantage for White after 7 dxe6 fxe6 8 e5 dxe5 9 \(\text{Q}xe5\) \(\text{Q}xb5\) 10 \(\text{W}xd8+\) \(\text{Q}xd8\) 11 \(\text{Q}xb5\) 0-0 (or 11...\(\text{Q}bd7\) 12 \(\text{Q}c4\) 0-0 13 a4 \(\text{Q}e4\) 14 0-0 a6 15 \(\text{Q}d6\) \(\text{Q}xd6\) 16 \(\text{Q}xd6\) \(\text{Q}c7\) 17 \(\text{Q}d1\) b6 18 a5 ± Polovodin-Akhmetov, St Petersburg 2000) 12 \(\text{Q}e3\) (White is better on account of the weak isolated e-pawn; Black has a long, arduous defence in front of him) 12...\(\text{Q}a6\) 13 c3 \(\text{Q}d5\) 14 \(\text{Q}d2\) \(\text{f}5\) 15 \(\text{Q}c4\) \(\text{e}7\) 16 0-0 \(\text{Q}d8\) 17 \(\text{Q}xa7\) \(\text{Q}ac7\) 18 a4 \(\text{Q}f4\) 19 \(\text{Q}b5\) \(\text{Q}cd5\) 20 \(\text{Q}ae1\) \(\text{Q}f6\) 21 g3 \(\text{Q}d3\) 22 \(\text{Q}xe6\) \(\text{Q}xb2\) 23 \(\text{Q}xb2\) \(\text{Q}xd2\) 24 \(\text{Q}c4\) \(\text{Q}d7\) 25 \(\text{Q}b6\) 1-0 Benjamin-Shaine, Boston 1988.

6 dxe6 \(\text{Q}xe6\) 6...\(\text{Q}xe6\) 7 e5 leads to a structural advantage for White.

7 \(\text{Q}g5\) b5

7...\(\text{Q}c6\) 8 \(\text{Q}xe6\) fxe6 9 g3 \(\text{Q}e7\) 10 \(\text{Q}g2\) g6 11 \(\text{Q}f4\) \(\text{Q}e5\) 12 \(\text{Q}e2\) \(\text{Q}g7\) 13 0-0 0-0 14 \(\text{Q}ad1\) was somewhat better for White in Damaso-Outerelo Uchá, Orense 2002.

Tempting Black to win a pawn.

9...\(\text{Q}c6\)

9...b4 10 \(\text{Q}e2\) \(\text{Q}xe4?!\) (Black wins a central pawn but falls behind in development with his king stuck in the centre) 11 \(\text{Q}g2\) d5 12 \(\text{Q}f4\) \(\text{W}f6\) 13 0-0 \(\text{Q}a7\) (anticipating White's next move) 14 \(\text{Q}xd5!\) (but White sacrifices anyway – the black king's cover is ripped to shreds) 14...\(\text{Q}xd5\) 15 \(\text{Q}xd5\) \(\text{Q}d6\) 16 \(\text{Q}g5\) + (Black is defenceless against the onslaught) 16...\(\text{Q}d4\) (16...\(\text{W}f5\) 17 \(\text{Q}f1+\) \(\text{Q}d7\) 18 \(\text{Q}e5\) \(\text{W}g4\) 19 \(\text{Q}d1\) \(\text{Q}c7\) 20 \(\text{W}f7+\) \(\text{Q}c8\) 21 \(\text{Q}e8\) 22 \(\text{Q}xe8\) \(\text{Q}xe8#) 17 \(\text{Q}e6+\) \(\text{Q}e7\) 18 \(\text{Q}xe7\) \(\text{Q}xe7\) 19 \(\text{Q}ad1\) \(\text{W}f6\) 20 \(\text{Q}xd6\) 1-0 Correa-Madeira, São Paulo 1991.

White’s central space advantage allows him to attack on any part of the board at will, as indeed he has on the last three moves.

15...h6 16 h4

Threatening g5, which makes Black choose a radical solution...

16...g5

...but this creates a new target.

17 \(\text{h}3\) \(\text{h}7\) 18 f4 (D)

Blowing open the kingside. It may seem risky to play like this with White’s king posted there but the g2-bishop defends White’s monarch well – and creating chaos is a Speelman trademark.

18...\(\text{g}7\) 19 hxg5 hxg5 20 fxg5 \(\text{e}5\) 21 g6

White jettisons a pawn to give his pieces some breathing space and begin an attack on the dark squares.

21...\(\text{x}g6\) 22 \(\text{d}2\) \(\text{hf}8\)?!

22...\(\text{e}5\) might provide a little more hope for Black.

23 \(\text{f}4\) \(\text{x}f4\) 24 \(\text{xf}4\) \(\text{d}8\) 25 e5

Grabbing some more dark squares.

25...d5 26 \(\text{h}6+\) \(\text{g}8\) 27 \(\text{xf}8+\)

A mini-combination to force a winning endgame.

27...\(\text{xf}8\) 28 \(\text{xe}6+\) \(\text{f}7\) 29 \(\text{xf}7+\)

Black could already resign with a clear conscience.

33...\(\text{g}7\) 34 \(\text{g}2\) \(\text{e}7\) 35 \(\text{e}6\) \(\text{g}6\)
36 \(\text{xf}5\) \(\text{c}6\) 37 \(\text{e}5\) \(\text{f}6\) 38 \(\text{e}4\) \(\text{d}6\)

\(\text{xe}6\) 41 \(\text{xe}7\) \(\text{xe}7\) is a won king and pawn endgame.

39 \(\text{f}3\) \(\text{d}1\)

Seeking piece activity is a golden rule of most endgames but here Black has left himself with too steep a hill to climb.

Game 50

Short – Eley

Rochdale 1977

1 d4 \(\text{f}6\) 2 \(\text{f}3\) c5 3 d5 e6 4 \(\text{c}3\)

If given the chance by Black’s move-order, I recommend that White recaptures on d5 with the e-pawn. (The actual move-order of our featured game was 1 d4 \(\text{f}6\) 2 \(\text{c}3\) c5 3 d5 e6 4 e4 exd5 5 exd5 d6 6 \(\text{Q}f3\), which is not only less relevant to our repertoire, but also somewhat inaccurate, since White passed over the powerful possibility of 5 e5!.

The black systems in this section are by and large unambitious. The basic plan for White is to develop sensibly and go for the b4 break on the queenside. I can’t see the attraction of these lines for Black as he often is left with a dull, inferior position with hopes for a draw at best.

6...a6
6...\(\text{Q}g4\) and 6...\(\text{Q}e7\) lead to similar stodgy positions and are considered in the next game.

6...g6 (D) seeks to fianchetto the dark-squared bishop, but this has its drawbacks, as Black doesn’t have time to fianchetto and get his king to safety.

7 \(\text{Q}b5+ \text{Q}bd7 8 0-0 \text{Q}g7 9 \text{Q}e1+ \text{Q}f8 10 \text{Q}f4\) (the misplaced black king already gives White a large advantage) 10...\(\text{W}c7\) (10...\(\text{Q}b6 11 \text{Q}e4\), as in Zhitnikov-Nozdrin, Ufa 2007, is just as hopeless since after 11...\(\text{Q}x e4\)

12 \(\text{Q}xe4\) Black cannot protect d6 and e8) 11 \(\text{W}e2 \text{Q}g8 12 \text{Q}g5 \text{Q}b6 13 \text{Q}ge4\) (Black is in no position to defend his weak d6-pawn with both rooks still out of play) 13...\(\text{Q}xe4 14 \text{Q}xe4 \text{Q}xd5\) (Black holds on to material equality for the moment, but the opening of another central file hugely favours White’s better developed forces; 14...\(\text{Q}f8 15 \text{Q}f6+ \text{Q}g7 16 \text{Q}e8+) 15 \text{Q}xd6 \text{W}d8 16 \text{Q}ad1 \text{Q}e6 17 \text{Q}c4 \text{Q}c7 18 \text{Q}xc5 \text{Q}xc4 19 \text{W}xc4 \text{Q}e8 20 \text{Q}g3 \text{W}f6 21 \text{Q}d7 \text{W}c6 22 \text{W}xc6 bxc6 23 \text{Q}b8! 1-0\) Kharitonov-Gutierrez, Bayamo 1989.

Black is helpless against a back-rank invasion.

7 a4 (D)
7...\(\text{Q}g4\)

Even though after 7...g6, White no longer has the bishop check on b5 (note that the need to insert ...a6 and a4 robs Black of ...\(\text{Q}a6-c7\) ideas), 8 \(\text{Q}f4!\) again casts doubt on Black’s entire strategy of fianchettoing his dark-squared bishop:

a) 8...\(\text{W}e7+ 9 \text{Q}e2 \text{Q}g7 10 \text{Q}d2 0-0 11 \text{Q}c4 \text{Q}e4 12 \text{Q}xe4 \text{W}xe4 13 \text{W}d2 \text{W}x g2 14 0-0-0 \text{Q}d7 15 \text{Q}xd6
a) $\text{h8} 16 \text{g3 b5 17 d2f6} + - \text{Izeta-Shannon, Santos 2001.}$

$9 \text{xf3 d7 10 0-0 e7}$

This move passive development of Black's bishop makes his position a lot harder to crack.

$11 f4 0-0 12 d2 e8 13 e1f8 14 e4 (D)$

Rather than going for the more ambitious plan of b4, White is content to exchange pieces and rely on the power of the two bishops.

$22...e4$

Black plays for piece activity but perhaps underestimated the power of White's passed d-pawn.

White threatens \( \text{We}2 \) forking bishop and knight and winning a piece. Already Black’s careless 8th move looks misjudged.

\(\textit{\textcopyright}g7\) 5 e4 0-0?! (D)

This provocative move seeks to keep maximum flexibility in the black position. Black avoids 5...d6 6 \(\textit{\textcopyright}b5\) (see Game 53) and may sometimes try to do without ...d6 altogether (e.g., 6 \(\textit{\textcopyright}e2\) b5?!). My recommendation is that you allow yourself to be provoked!

6 e5!

White goes for it! The way to refute Black’s ambitious opening is to attack full steam ahead.

6...
\(\textit{\textcopyright}g4\)?!

It was originally thought that the white pawns were overextended and this, together with Black’s lead in development, would give Black at least equality. However, White’s next move, suggested by Yermolinsky, put that assessment into question.

6...\(\textit{\textcopyright}e8\) has proved tougher, even though it invites White to launch a powerful kingside attack by 7 h4! d6 8 e6!? (this sacrifice plays an essential part in weakening Black’s kingside pawn-structure) 8...fxe6 9 h5 (White goes all-out for the kill), and now (D):

This highly striking idea presents severe difficulties for Black. The g4-knight turns out to be short of good squares.

7...\(\text{\textcopyright}h6\)

The alternatives don’t seem tempting:

a) 7...\(\text{\textcopyright}xe5\) leaves Black’s knight stranded and after 8 f4 f6 (forced; 8...h6 9 \(\text{\textcopyright}h3\) wins a piece for White) 9 \(\text{\textcopyright}xh7!\) \(\text{\textcopyright}xh7\) 10 fxe5 fxe5?? 11 \(\text{\textcopyright}d3\) White threatens a very nasty check on h5.

b) 7...h5 weakens the kingside. Then 8 f4 (intending h3 and g4) 8...d6 9 e6 gives White an interesting attacking position.
c) 7...f6 8 g3 xh7 gxf2 9 gxf2 gxf7 10 d3 f5 11 g2 e6?! 12 h4 h8 13 c4 exd5 14 xd5 c6 15 g5 g8 16 xf6+ xf6 17 xf6 d6 18 h5 -- Aronian-Guyot, Bastia rapid 2003.

8...f6
8...xe5 (a very greedy move) 9 h5 gives White a murderous attack, as Baburin analysed: 9...f5 (forced; 9...g7 10 xh7! xh7 11 hxg6+ fxg6 12 xh6 xh6 13 d2 g5 14 xg5 f6 15 d3+ ++) 10 g7!! xh7 11 hxg6+ g7 12 h7+ g8 13 h5 fxg6 14 xg6+ g7 15 h6 f7 16 d3 ++. 8...c7 9 d6!? exd6 10 d5 is no solution to Black’s problems either.

After 9...f5 White just ploughs on with 10 h5 f5 11 hxg6 hxg6 12 d6!, creating chaos in the black camp. 9...f5 10 xh5 g4 11 e2 xh6 12 h5 is also good for White; e.g., 12...f7?! 13 hxg6 hxg6 14 d3 e5! 15 h3 d6 16 h7+ f7 17 h6 f6 18 xg6 xg6 19 h5 xh5 20 xh5+ g8 21 h6 1-0 Sturua-Krivolapov, Senden 2001.

Black is in trouble:

a) 12 h6 was also analysed by Baburin. White has a very attractive way to continue: 13 hxg6! hxg6 14 h8+!! xh8 15 h5 f7 (forced) 16 gxh7+ g7 17 d3 e6 18 0-0-0 with a winning attack due to the threat of h1. The idea behind this check is to interfere with what has proved to be Black’s most popular plan, namely to castle, play ...\texttt{Q}a6-c7 and perhaps ...	exttt{g}g4. White hopes the check will disrupt this approach and force Black onto his own resources. Black has countered in three different ways in practice.

This is the best way for Black to block the check, but the alternatives also deserve attention:

a) 6...	exttt{Q}fd7 (perhaps the worst way of getting out of check with the exception of the ridiculous 6...	exttt{Q}f8; for no apparent reason, Black interferes with his own development) 7 a4! (again adopting a policy of making it difficult for Black to carry out his most likely plan; this move is directed against Black's expansion on the queenside by ...a6 and ...b5) 7...0-0 (7...	exttt{Q}a6 8 0-0 \texttt{Q}c7 9 \texttt{Q}e1 \texttt{Q}xb5 10 axb5 0-0 11 \texttt{Q}f4 \texttt{b}6 12 e5 \texttt{f}5 13 h3 h6 14 \texttt{W}e2 g5 15 \texttt{Q}g3 \texttt{W}d7 16 h4 f6 17 e6 \pm I.Sokolov-Topalov, Hoogeveen 2006) 8 0-0 \texttt{Q}a6 9 \texttt{Q}e1 \texttt{Q}c7 10 \texttt{Q}c4 b6 11 \texttt{Q}f4 (White's play is of course not solely concerned with limiting his opponent's possibilities; here he prepares e5, a major idea in this variation – White must open some lines in order to attack successfully) 11...\texttt{Q}a6 12 \texttt{Q}xa6 \texttt{Q}xa6 13 \texttt{W}e2 \texttt{Q}c7 14 e5?! Introduction and Unusual Second Moves for Black

Dutch specialists tend to be quite uncompromising, creative types. They often know their pet lines very well and make no secret of their aggressive intentions. I have used the 2 \textit{g}5 Anti-Dutch successfully for a number of years. Very few players I have encountered have felt comfortable on the black side. Even fewer have been able to find their way to a playable game. For this reason many Stonewall Dutch enthusiasts play 1...e6 followed by 2...f5 but as we shall see White can disrupt this plan with the unusual move 3 d5!?.

The main theme running through both these systems is that White is looking for an advantageous time to play the e4 pawn-break, which often ruins the black pawn-structure. In this introduction we shall concentrate on divergences from the main lines (2...g6 and 2...h6).

Game 57
\textbf{Rowson – Preuss}
\textit{Copenhagen 1996}

\textbf{1 d4 f5 2 \textit{g}5 (D)}

In the Dutch Defence it is very difficult for Black to organize himself in a satisfactory manner without moving his g8-knight or his e7-pawn. This strange-looking bishop move is a direct attempt to take advantage of this very problem. Here we look at options for Black where he tries to side-step the issue or mistakenly challenges White to prove his strategy.

\textbf{2...d6}

Black’s main move, 2...g6, is the subject of Games 60 and 61, while the sharp 2...h6 is covered in Games 62 and 63. In our next game we shall see Black challenging White to carry out his strategy with 2...\textit{xf}6 3 \textit{xf}6. Other 2nd moves are considered in Game 59.

\textbf{3 \textit{c}3 h6}

A very committal decision, as now Black suffers in nearly all the tactics as a result of his weak kingside light squares. However, other moves allow White to play e4 without any concessions:

a) 3...\( \text{d}d7 \) 4 e4 \( \text{d}f6 \) and in Vo-nich-Belgortsev, Tomsk 2001, it appears White could have achieved a clear plus with 5 e5!.

b) After 3...g6 4 e4 h6 5 e3 \( \text{g}7 \)

3 \text{\textit{e}xf6 \textit{exf6 4 e3 (D)}}

4...d5

Black has also tried:

a) 4...\text{\textit{e}}7 5 c4 c6 6 \text{\textit{c}}c3 d5?! 7 cxd5 cxd5 8 \text{\textit{wb}}3 and White simply wins a good pawn, Kasparov-Wrobel, Katowice simul 1993.

b) 4...g6 5 \text{\textit{d}}d3 \text{\textit{g}}7 6 h4 \text{\textit{e}}7 7 \text{\textit{e}}e2! \text{\textit{c}}c6 (not 7...\text{\textit{w}}b4+ 8 \text{\textit{b}}b3 \text{\textit{w}}xb2?! 9 \text{\textit{d}}d5 ++) 8 c3 d5?! 9 \text{\textit{w}}b3 \text{\textit{d}}d6 10 \text{\textit{f}}f4 \text{\textit{e}}e7 11 c4 dxc4 12 \text{\textit{xc}}4 ± Caselas-Cabanas-Cabrera Moreno, Spanish Universities Ch 1994.

c) 4...\text{\textit{e}}7?! doesn’t look natural but there are two small threats (...\text{\textit{w}}b4+ and ...\text{\textit{f}}4) so White should probably be satisfied with a pull after 5 \text{\textit{c}}c3 c6 6 \text{\textit{w}}f3 d5 7 \text{\textit{d}}d3 g6 8 h3. 5 \text{\textit{d}}d3!?

White’s chances are fairly long-term and c4 cannot be stopped anyway so flexible development makes a lot of sense. Nevertheless, the immediate 5 c4 is more concrete and a theoretically critical continuation:

Game 62

Summerscale – Santo-Roman

Montpellier 1994

1 d4 f5 2 g5 h6!? 3 h4

For readers who are not happy with the very sharp nature of the play after this move, there is a calmer option in 3 f4?!, which also has some nice points of its own, including 3...g5 4 e5 and 3...f6 4 c3 d6?! 5 e4!.

However, it is hard to drum up much of an initiative after 3...f6 4 c3 d5 if Black plays alertly.

3...g5

This is the most testing response to White’s opening: Black launches an attack on the kingside using White’s bishop as a target. To do so without first developing entails some risk, as you might expect.

4 e4! (D)
Note that most other black third moves here are equally well met this way; for example, 3...c5 4 e4 \(\text{\textit{b6}}\) (giving the king a square!) 5 exf5 \(\text{\textit{xb2}}\) 6 \(\text{\textit{d2}}\) \(\text{\textit{c6}}\) 7 \(\text{\textit{b1}}\) \(\text{\textit{xd4}}\) 8 \(\text{\textit{gxf3}}\) \(\text{\textit{d5}}\) 9 \(\text{\textit{d3}}\) \(\text{\textit{f6}}\) 10.0–0 b6 11 \(\text{\textit{xf6}}\) gxf6 12 \(\text{\textit{h4}}\) h5 13 \(\text{\textit{c4}}\) \(\text{\textit{d4}}\) 14 \(\text{\textit{g6}}\) \(\text{\textit{h6}}\) 15 \(\text{\textit{b3}}\) with excellent compensation for White, Hodgson-Zeidler, Swansea 1999.

\(d2\) 6...e6 7 \(\text{\textit{g5}}\) hx\(\text{\textit{g5}}\) 8 \(\text{\textit{g5}}\) \(\text{\textit{e7}}\) (Williams’s 8...\(\text{\textit{f6}}\)?! may be dubious in view of 9 exf5 \(\text{\textit{xf5}}\)?! 10 \(\text{\textit{d3}}\)! \(\text{\textit{xf2}}\)+ 11 \(\text{\textit{d1}}\) ++) leads to a semi-endgame where White’s rook and two pawns seem stronger than Black’s knight and bishop.

\(d3\) 6...\(\text{\textit{c6}}\) 7 \(\text{\textit{g5}}\) fxe4 8 \(\text{\textit{c3}}\) hx\(\text{\textit{g5}}\) 9 \(\text{\textit{g5}}\) \(\text{\textit{h6}}\) 10 \(\text{\textit{cxe4}}\) e6 11 h4 ± (S. Williams).

\(d4\) After 6...\(\text{\textit{f6}}\) 7 \(\text{\textit{g6}}\) \(\text{\textit{c6}}\) (a better try than 7...\(\text{\textit{xe4}}\) 8 \(\text{\textit{e5}}\) \(\text{\textit{d6}}\) 9 \(\text{\textit{c3}}\), 7...d6 8 \(\text{\textit{c4}}\) or 7...e6 8 \(\text{\textit{g5}}\) hx\(\text{\textit{g5}}\) 9 \(\text{\textit{g5}}\) \(\text{\textit{e7}}\) 10 e5), an option not mentioned by Williams is 8 \(\text{\textit{xe5}}\)?? \(\text{\textit{xe5}}\) 9 dx\(\text{\textit{e5}}\) (\(D\)). Then:

\(d42\) 9...\(\text{\textit{xe4}}\) 10 \(\text{\textit{e2}}\) e6 (10...gxh4 11 \(\text{\textit{h5}}\) \(\text{\textit{g5}}\) 12 f4 ++) 11 \(\text{\textit{h5}}\) \(\text{\textit{e7}}\) 12 f3 ±.

\(d43\) 9...gxh4 10 exf6 and now:

d433) 10...fxe4 11 \(\text{e2}!\) ? \(\text{exf6}!\) (11...d5 is probably best, but after 12 c4! 5 \(\text{g3}\) fxe4

After 5...f4 6 \(\text{xf4}\) gxf4 7 \(\text{h5}\) + \(\text{f8}\) 8 \(\text{f5}\) + (D) Black is faring badly whatever he plays now; for example:

White has now got a much better version of the Staunton Gambit (1 d4 f5 2 e4) since Black has significantly weakened his kingside. White’s plan is simply to play on these weaknesses as much as possible.

8...d6 9 \(\text{c4}\) \(\text{bd7}\) 10 \(\text{d3}\)
10 ²e5 is also an interesting possibility.

10...²f8 11 d5

By grabbing further space, I more or less obliged Black to open the centre for my better-developed pieces.

11...e5 12 dxe6 ²xe6 13 ²xe6 ²xe6 14 0-0-0 ²d7 15 ²c4! 0-0-0?

Black cracks under the pressure, but it is easy to understand why he didn’t want to castle kingside: 15...0-0 16 ²h1 ²ae8 17 h4 g4?! 18 ²e5 ²c6 19 ²g6 ²f7 20 ²xd6 ±.

1 d4 f5 2 ²g5 h6 3 ²h4 g5 4 e4 ²f6!?

This has proved a tougher challenge than 4...²g7.

5 e5 e6! (D)

This prevents Black from meeting ²h5+ with ...²f7 and could be the critical line.

Black prevents the check but with a non-developing move. Other options:

a) 8...²c6 9 ²h5+ ²d8 10 c3 d5 11 ²f3 ²d7 (11...fxg3 12 fxg3?! ²g7 13 0-0 ²d7 14 ²bd2 ²d6 15 ²ae1 ± Orzech-Malaniuk, Barlinek 2006) 12 0-0 ²d6 13 ²bd2 ²e7 14 ²ae1 ± Moiseenko-Jakubiec, Polanica Zdroj 1999.

b) 8...fxg3 9 ²h5+ ²d8 10 hxg3 ²xd4 11 ²c3 ²e5+ 12 ²ge2 ²c6 13 0-0-0 gives White a very promising attack.

c) 8...\textit{g}g8?! was met by 9 \textit{w}h5+ \textit{w}f7 10 \textit{w}xf7+ \textit{w}xf7 11 \textit{d}e2 fxg3 12 hxg3 \textit{d}c6 13 c3 d5 in Prié-del Rey, San Sebastian 2006, leaving Black at least equal. However, 9 \textit{d}c3 fxg3 10 hxg3 d6 11 \textit{d}e4 could be an improvement for White as 11...\textit{w}xd4?? fails to 12 \textit{b}b5+.

9 \textit{f}f3

9 \textit{e}e2?! also looks promising as 9...h5?! 10 \textit{f}f3 fxg3 11 fxg3 gives White a raging attack.

9...d6 10 0-0 \textit{d}d7 11 \textit{e}e4 \textit{c}c6

11...\textit{c}c6 12 d5 exd5 13 \textit{x}xd5 \textit{f}f6 is probably a better attempt to survive.

12 \textit{c}c3 \textit{xe}4 13 \textit{xe}4 \textit{c}c6 14 c4

14 \textit{fxg5}! hxg5 15 \textit{x}g5 followed by either \textit{xf}4 or \textit{xe}6 works out well for White.

14...d5 (D)

Now it's suddenly unclear. Black may capture on g3 at the most inconvenient moment.

16 \textit{a}a4 dxc4 17 \textit{xc}c4 \textit{g}g7 18 \textit{ad}1 \textit{d}d7 19 \textit{e}e4 e5?!

This initiates sharp play that slightly favours White.

20 d5 \textit{d}d4 21 \textit{xd}d4 exd4 22 \textit{xd}d4! b5??

It's hard to imagine what Black was hoping for with this move. It loses in obvious fashion to a number of moves. After 22...\textit{hd}8 there is still everything to play for.

23 \textit{c}c6 \textit{d}d8 24 d6 cxd6 25 \textit{xd}6 \textit{xd}6 26 \textit{xd}6 \textit{we}6 27 \textit{f}f7+ 1-0

This move aims to disrupt Black's normal flow in the Dutch and will be especially effective against Stonewall players, who will be at a bit of a loss now. The aim is to gain a small safe advantage but there are sharper options along the way too.

3...d6

Or:

a) 3...exd5 is the subject of Game 65.

b) 3...Qf6 4 dxe6 dxe6 5 Qxd8+ Axd8 6 Ac3 Ab4 7 Ad2 c6 8 e4 (this move seeks to leave Black with a permanent weakness on e6) 8...fxe4 9 Aexe4 Axd2+ 10 Aexd2 and, having achieved his objective, White enjoyed a small advantage in Cifuentes-D.Parr, Hastings 1994/5.

c) 3...Ad6 4 dxe6 dxe6 5 Ac3 Af6 6 e4 (again this is the critical pawn-break for White) and now:

c1) 6...Ab4 7 Axd8+ Axd8 8 Axd2 fxe4 9 Aexe4 Axd2+ 10 Aexd2 and again White is better, because he has a straightforward plan of developing and putting pressure on Black's weak e-pawn, Ortega-B.Kovačević, Formia 1995.

c2) 6...fxe4 7 Ag5 0-0 8 Ac4 Ac7 9 Aexe4 Aes 10 Axf6+ Axf6 11 Ae4 Ag6 12 Ag3 Axb3 13 hxb3 Ae4+ 14 Ae2 ± Stroppa-Castaldo, Turin 2005.

c3) 6...Ac6 7 exf5 Ae7 8 fxe6 Ae6 9 Ae3 0-0-0 10 Ad3 Ag4 is equal, Dubkov-S.Williams, Salzburg 2004.

d) 3...Ab4+! 4 c3 Ad6 is a twin variation to 3...Ad6. Black hopes to prove that c3 took away the natural square from White's knight, but White can utilize the open d1-a4 diagonal to force e4 by tactical means: 5 dxe6 dxe6 6 Abd2 Af6 7 e4! fxe4 8 Aexe4 Aexe4 9 Aa4+ Ad7 10 Aexe4 Afd6 11 Ae2 Ad7 12 Ad3 with a slightly better position for White, Utkin-Ulybin, St Petersburg 2003.

4 dxe6 Ae6 5 Ag5 (D)

White tries to drive the bishop from its best diagonal and prepares the way for e4.

5...Ad7 6 Ac3 Af6 7 g3

7 e4 is also interesting here.

7...Ac6 8 Aexe6 Ae6 9 Ah3 d5 10 0-0 Abd7 11 Ae3 g6 12 Ae3 Ae4 13 Aexe4 dxe4 14 Ae3 Ag8 15 Ae3 0-0-0 16 Afd1

White is slightly better in view of his bishop-pair. Against a normal move like 16...a6 he should continue with a4 and b4, launching a queenside attack. Black, perhaps lulled into a false sense of security by the closed nature of the position, blundered with:

16...Ab8?? 17 Axa7+ 1-0

The bishop is immune from capture on account of Aa5+ winning the rook on d8. Black, probably disgusted with himself, called it a day.

5 ∆g5

White simply continues his development, hoping to exploit the weakness of the light squares later on. White has two other options, one highly materialistic yet hard to refute, while the second is solid but with long-term prospects:

a) 5 ∆g5?! is a very sharp option that wins material at the expense of White’s development. The dangers are illustrated by the following examples: 5...∆e7 6 ∆xh7 c6 (6...∆xh7?! 7 ∆xg8 ∆h4 8 ∆b3 ∆c6 9 c3 ∆e5 10 e3 f4 11 ∆a3 c6 12 ∆e2 ∆f5 13 c4 0-0-0 gave Black more than sufficient compensation in Celandor-Yusupov, Stockholm 2002) 7 ∆b3 and now:

5...∆e7

5...∆f6 is answered by 6 ∆b3.

6 h4 (D)

6 ∆xe7 ∆xe7 7 ∆c3 scores quite well too.

With the text-move, White wants to open the h-file for his rook, which would give him some interesting tactical possibilities, as we shall see.

6...∆f6 7 ∆b3

White is hoping for ...h6, which would further weaken Black’s light squares on the kingside.

7...∆e4 8 ∆bd2 ∆c6 9 ∆xe4 fxe4 10 ∆d2 ∆xg5 11 hxg5 d5?!
11...\text{\texttt{W}}xg5 gives White less to bite on.

12 c4

White rightly goes about undermining Black’s big pawn-centre. 12 g6!? also poses awkward problems.

12...\text{\texttt{B}}d4 13 \text{\texttt{W}}c3 \text{\texttt{B}}e6 14 g6

This is one of the tactical drawbacks of the exchange on g5 for Black, as the pawn becomes a real thorn in his side.

14...h6 15 \text{\texttt{W}}e5 dxc4 16 e3 \text{\texttt{W}}g5 17 \text{\texttt{W}}xe4 0-0 18 \text{\texttt{A}}xc4 (D)

White has an attack and an extra pawn to boot.

18...\text{\texttt{B}}h8?

18...\text{\texttt{B}}e8 is better.

19 \text{\texttt{A}}xe6 \text{\texttt{B}}e8 20 \text{\texttt{W}}d5!

This tactical point enables White to hold on to his extra piece.

20...\text{\texttt{W}}f6 21 \text{\texttt{A}}xc8 \text{\texttt{B}}axc8 22 \text{\texttt{W}}f7 \text{\texttt{W}}g5 23 \text{\texttt{B}}f3 \text{\texttt{A}}xe3+ 1-0

There’s only one more way for Black to create problems within our repertoire:

Game 66

A. Shneider – Summerscale

European Clubs Cup, Bratislava 1996

1 d4 d5 2 \text{\texttt{B}}f3 c6 3 c4 e6 4 e3 f5

5 \text{\texttt{Q}}c3 \text{\texttt{H}}f6 6 \text{\texttt{A}}d3 \text{\texttt{A}}d6 7 h3 0-0 8 g4 (D)

This is the big idea. Black would be foolish to take on g4 and open the h-file and so must find a way to defend against gxf5.

8...\text{\texttt{B}}e4
This is the most natural move but it does not solve all of Black’s problems. 8...\texttt{h8} is the main alternative. After 9 \texttt{d2} 10 \texttt{gxf5} 11 \texttt{cxd5} \texttt{xc3} 12 \texttt{xc3} \texttt{cxd5} 13 \texttt{e5} \texttt{c6} 14 \texttt{d2} 15 \texttt{f4} \texttt{b4} 16 \texttt{b1} \texttt{c6} 17 a3 a5! ? chances were equal in the game A.Shneider-Moroz, Enakievo 1997.

8 Odds and Ends

Here I shall examine the various irregular systems that Black tries from time to time. The key is to keep your cool when faced with these openings. Just develop sensibly and use the space advantage you are invariably given. Above all, don’t expect too much and don’t underestimate your opponent just because he plays a few funny-looking moves in the opening. I used to make a living in intermediate tournaments off opponents who did exactly that!

Again, this idea of queenside expansion is quite effective.

11 \textit{w}e2

Perhaps 11 e5 \textit{d}5 12 \textit{e}4 \textit{e}7 13 \textit{g}5 is even more effective; for example, 13...f6 14 exf6 gxf6 15 \textit{h}6 (the immediate 15 \textit{e}5! is promising) 15...\textit{c}7, when 16 \textit{c}1 keeps the advantage with no risk. Instead the game B.Steiner-Beck, Vienna Ch 2004 continued 16 \textit{e}5?! \textit{fx}e5 17 \textit{w}h5+ \textit{d}8 18 \textit{g}5 \textit{b}6 19 \textit{f}7+ \textit{c}7 20 \textit{hx}h8, when 20...\textit{xd}4 would have been very unclear. have resigned after 20...\textit{x}h8?? 21 \textit{\textshock}xe5+.

11...\textit{\textshock}b6 12 b4 \textit{\textshock}c4?

Black has overlooked a tactic; instead he should swallow his pride and retreat.

This loses a second pawn, but the black position was pretty disgusting in any case.

Game 68

\textbf{Summerscale – Basman}

\textit{British Ch, Plymouth 1992}

1 d4 (D)

1...\textit{\textshock}h6

This is perhaps the most irregular of all the openings we cover. Of course, it is always possible for an opponent to throw something at you that you haven’t seen before, but in most cases sensible development or a little accurate calculation should see you through.

Other attempts to confuse White include:

a) 1...\textit{\textshock}c6 2 \textit{\textshock}f3 and now:

a1) 2...d5 transposes to the Anti-Chigorin line already discussed in Game 34.

a2) 2...d6 3 d5 \textit{\textshock}e5 4 \textit{\textshock}xe5 dxe5 5 e4 favours White; e.g., 5...\textit{\textshock}e6 6 \textit{\textshock}b5+! \textit{\textshock}d7 7 dxe6 or 5...\textit{\textshock}f6 6 \textit{\textshock}c3 a6 7 f4.

b) 1...\textit{\textshock}e6 (1...b6 can come to the same thing, but shows Black’s hand a move earlier and so gives White more possibilities) 2 \textit{\textshock}f3 b6 (Owen’s Defence is the only variation after 1...\textit{\textshock}e6 that takes us outside the scope of those already analysed; e.g., 2...\textit{\textshock}c5 3 e3 directs the game towards the Colle-Zukertort or the Classical Queen’s Indian) 3 e4 \textit{\textshock}b7 4 \textit{\textshock}d3 (the best way to meet unusual variations is to play simply – and the clearest plan in this position is to complete development, protect the pawn-centre and then expand on the queenside) 4...c5 5 c3 \(\text{&}f6\) 6 \(\text{&}bd2\) \(\text{&}c6\) 7 a3 \(\text{&}e7\) 8 0-0 d6 9 b4 cxd4 10 cxd4 \(\text{&}e8\) 11 \(\text{&}b2\). White has completed all his objectives and stands better.

c) 1...c5 2 d5 is closely related to the Anti-Benoni lines we examined in Chapter 6. There are many possible transpositions to that chapter, while most of the independent options can be comfortably handled over the board by anyone who has studied that chapter and understood the main themes. A couple of lines have a different flavour though:

  c1) 2...e5 (an old opening that goes by various names, such as the Semi-Benoni or Benoni Wall) 3 e4 d6 4 \(\text{&}c3\) \(\text{&}e7\) 5 \(\text{&}f3\) and now:

  c11) 5...\(\text{&}f6\) is a kind of Czech Benoni (1 d4 \(\text{&}f6\) 2 c4 c5 3 d5 e5 4 \(\text{&}c3\) d6 5 e4 \(\text{&}e7\)) where White’s access to the c4-square gives him some extra options, and greater freedom on the queenside; like in some Anti-Benoni lines, 6 \(\text{&}b5+\) is a useful disruptive check to throw in here.

c12) Therefore Black’s principal attempt to justify this move-order rests in the immediate attempt to exchange off his king’s bishop, which involves tortuous manoeuvres in the regular Czech Benoni. However, 5...\(\text{&}g4\) 6 h3 \(\text{&}xh3\) 7 \(\text{&}xh3\) \(\text{&}g5\) 8 \(\text{&}xg5\) \(\text{&}xg5\) can be met with the forcing variation 9 \(\text{&}d2\) \(\text{&}d8\) 10 \(\text{&}e4\) \(\text{&}f6\) 11 \(\text{&}e3\) \(\text{&}c8\) 12 \(\text{&}xh3\) \(\text{&}e4\) 13 \(\text{&}e3\) \(\text{&}xh3\) 14 \(\text{&}e3\) \(\text{&}e4\) 15 \(\text{&}e3\) \(\text{&}e4\) 16 \(\text{&}e3\) \(\text{&}e4\) 17 \(\text{&}e3\) \(\text{&}e4\) 18 \(\text{&}e3\) \(\text{&}e4\) 19 \(\text{&}e3\) \(\text{&}e4\) 20 \(\text{&}e3\), when White had a pleasant ending in Baburin-Rochev, Kilkenny 2000.

c2) 2...f5 is the so-called Clarendon Court – a Dutch-Benoni hybrid with which I still have a 100% score as Black, including a victory over Mark Hebden. However, I suspect that this is because none of my opponents have played 3 e4! fxe4 4 \(\text{&}c3\) \(\text{&}f6\) 5 g4 (White threatens g5, more or less forcing Black’s response) 5...h6 (this is a serious weakening of the black kingside) 6 \(\text{&}g3\) d6 7 h3 \(\text{&}bd7\) 8 \(\text{&}ge2\), when White has every reason to look to the future with confidence. He can recapture on e4 at will and then set about probing those light-square weaknesses.

  d) 1...c5 is the Englund Gambit. 2 dxe5 \(\text{&}c6\) 3 \(\text{&}f3\) \(\text{&}e7\) 4 \(\text{&}c3\) \(\text{&}xe5\) 5 e4 (a very sensible approach, not attempting a direct refutation but keeping hold of a space and development advantage) 5...c6 6 \(\text{&}e2\) \(\text{&}xf3+\) 7 \(\text{&}xf3\) d6 8 0-0 \(\text{&}e6\) 9 \(\text{&}e1\) \(\text{&}d7\) 10 \(\text{&}f4\) \(\text{&}e7\) 11 \(\text{&}d2\) \(\text{&}f6\) 12 \(\text{&}ad1\) gave White a clear advantage in the game Timman-Hendricks, simul 1987.

  e) 1...d6 2 e4 \(\text{&}f6\) 3 \(\text{&}c3\) gives Black three non-Pirc options:

    e1) 3...c4 4 \(\text{&}f3\) \(\text{&}g4\) 5 h3 \(\text{&}h5\) 6 \(\text{&}e2\) e6 7 g4 \(\text{&}g6\) 8 \(\text{&}g5\) \(\text{&}e7\) 9 h4!? h5 10 \(\text{&}xf6\) \(\text{&}xf6\) 11 \(\text{&}h3\) ± Hebden-Adams, Hastings 1996/7.

    e2) 3...\(\text{&}bd7\) transposes to ‘e3’ after 4 \(\text{&}f3\) e5, but 4 f4!? is also possible.

    e3) 3...c5 4 \(\text{&}f3\) (4 dxe5 is a shade better for White, but the position is barren) 4...\(\text{&}bd7\) (transposing to a Philidor) 5 \(\text{&}c4\) (5 g4!? is an interesting and popular gambit) 5...\(\text{&}e7\) 6 0-0 0-0 7 a4 c6 8 \(\text{&}e1\) and then:
e21) 8...a5 9 h3 exd4 10 Qxd4 Qc5 11 Qf4 7e6 12 Qxe6 fxe6 13 e5 keeps Black under pressure, Motylev-Emelín, European Ch, Budva 2009.
e22) 8...b6 9 d5 (9 Qa2!? ) 9...cxd5 10 Qxd5 Qb7 11 b3 Qc8 12 Qe2 gives White enough of a grip over d5 to claim an edge, Kasparov-Azmaiparashvili, Rethymnon rapid 2003.
f) 1...Qf6 2 Qf3 d6 3 Qc3 d5? (a move-down Barry where White lacks his regular attacking plan; 3...g6 is a Pirc, while 3...Qbd7 4 e4 {4 Qf4!? is uncharted} 4...e5 and 3...c6 4 e4 are both covered via 1...d6 above; 3...Qf5 was mentioned at the start of Game 17) 4 Qg5 makes it hard for Black to justify his loss of tempo.

This game was a bit of a daunting experience for me, as I was up against the guru of unusual opening lines. At least I was forewarned and therefore expecting the unexpected!

2...c5

Basman has also tried 2...g5, 2...e6 and 2...a6 here. All depend on an element of surprise and unpredictability and should be relatively easy to deal with by common sense.

3 c3 Qxd4 4 cxd4 d6 5 Qc3 g5

Black is playing a strange kind of Sicilian with ...h6 and ...g5 thrown in voluntarily. Needless to say, this idea hasn’t really caught on!

6 Qc4 Qc6 7 Qge2 Qf6

In his next game, Basman was willing to repeat his opening up to this point. In Greer-Basman, British Ch, Plymouth 1992, he varied with 7...Qg7 8 Qf6 9 Qh1 a6 10 f4 b5 11 Qd3 Qg4 and although White objectively had the better chances after 12 d5 Qd4 13 h3 Qh5 14 g4 Qxg4!? 15 hxg4 Qxg4, Black was probably happy with his position and went on to win.

8 Qb3 Qh7

Black defends creatively, but his pieces begin to look a little awkwardly placed.

9 0-0 a6 10 d3 Qg7 11 e3 Qg4

Having more or less completed my development it was time to undertake some action.

12 Qd5 e6 13 Qb6 Qb8 14 Qac1 Intending d5, which Black prevents.

14...d5 15 exd5

Of course White wants to open the centre as the black king is stranded.

15...Qb4 (D)

I took a glance at Black’s position and noted its rather ridiculous appearance. Therefore I started looking for a forced win.

16 Qxc8 Qxc8 17 Qa4+ b5 18 Qxb5+! Qe7 19 Qxb4+ Qf6 20 Qxc8 Qxc8 21 Qxa6 Qc7 22 d6 Qxd6 23 Qb7 1-0

Bored with the same old openings? Worried about having to learn too much theory? Then this book will come as a godsend. Aaron Summerscale presents a set of exceptionally dangerous opening weapons for White. Each recommended line is based on a solid positional foundation, yet also promises long-term (and short-term!) attacking chances. The variations are not just easy to learn and play, but they also set Black complex problems.

- A queen’s pawn repertoire based on rapid piece development
- Reveals many lethal attacking ideas and traps
- Features the legendary ‘150’ and Barry Attacks

For this new edition, the publishers enlisted the help of hotshot opening writer Sverre Johnsen, who has updated the coverage where necessary, while retaining the spirit, charm and aims of Summerscale’s original work. The killer repertoire remains easy to learn, and is now more dangerous than ever!

Grandmaster Aaron Summerscale is a prominent figure in UK chess, who won the British Rapidplay Championship in 2000. He is also a renowned chess trainer, who has been involved in coaching some of England’s best junior players. Sverre Johnsen is from Norway, and an enthusiastic chess analyst, researcher, organizer and writer. He is co-author of highly popular works on the London System, Ruy Lopez and the Stonewall Dutch.
